DRAFT PROBLEMS CAUSE APPEAL TO STUDY THE RULES

Washington Asks Registrants to Inform Themselves and Thus Avoid Confusion.

EXPLAINS KNOTTY POINTS

With 11 States Still to Report, Drawing Is Not Expected Before Next Saturday.

CENSUS PADDING CHARGED

Senators Assert Figures Are Not Fair to the North—Alien Exemption Assailed.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—With the drawing of lots for the selective draft army awaiting only completion of exemption machinery in a few scattered parts of the country, officials here are anxious that registrants take every opportunity between now and the day of drawing to inform themselves thoroughly regarding exemption regulations so as to reduce to a minimum the confusion to be cleared up after designations are made.

To this end attention was directed today to various sections of the regulations over which questions have arisen, and it was suggested that the local boards and the press co-operate during the week or so remaining before lots are drawn to insure that the registered men know just how to perform their part in the great task of examination and exemption.

So that easier access may be had to the lists of registration numbers in the hands of local boards Provost Marshal General Crowder telegraphed the Governors of all the States asking that instead of posting the lists at the board offices, they place them "in some safe, central official, such as Police Headquarters." In the larger cities especially, the Provost Marshal General said, much inconvenience had been caused by having the lists available only at out-of-the-way board offices.

Eleven States to Report.

Only eleven States tonight had not reported their organizations complete, and in many of these only a few district boards had not finished numbering registration cards. The great majority of districts throughout the country are ready for the drawing, and when the Governors of the missing States telegraph that all the boards in their jurisdiction have filed their lists the drawing date will be set. Officials think it will not be earlier than Saturday.

Officials here are anxious that local boards make it clear everywhere that no question of exemption of any registered man for any other cause than physical disability or dependent relatives can be taken up before the local boards. The whole matter of industrial exemptions is left to the superior boards, one of which has been created in each Federal judicial district.

No individual case where exemption is desired because the registrant is engaged in an industry classified as vital to the conduct of the war will be taken up until that individual has been called up for examination by his local board, found to be without dependents and physically fit for military duty, and certified to the superior board. After that application to the superior board for exemption on other grounds will be admissible. The registrant or his employer may file necessary affidavits with the superior board seeking exemption, and the case will be heard promptly.

Another point on which there has been much doubt is the status of registrants absent from their registration districts. Scores of requests have come from men in this situation, asking if they will have to return to their home towns for examination. They have been informed that if they are selected for examination each will be notified by mail by his local board and then can apply to the local board for permission to undergo examination in the town where he is situated. Such action cannot be taken, however, until the registrant has actually been summoned by his local board.

Blanks for All Claims.

The Government has distributed to all local boards complete sets of blanks to cover appeals, transfers, and any other matter in connection with the process. Full instructions for filling out any form of blank and specific instructions as to the manner in which each is to be used also have been provided. Registrants may examine these at the quarters of local boards, but every effort has been made to prevent the filing of affidavits or other documents that do not apply to a case actually under consideration. Otherwise the boards would be swamped with efforts to get a decision in advance.

It was for this reason that the regulations provided that no man could come up for examination in any way before either local or superior boards until he was actually summoned for military duty.

Probably the point in the whole process which has led to the greatest misunderstanding and confusion is the system by which industrial exemption is to be granted. Many persons have regarded it as certain that men in munition-making or other strictly war industries would be exempted as a class. That is not the fact. What is to govern the process is the importance of the individual in such an industry. If another man could take his place without prejudice to the working of the plant military exemption will not be granted him.

To make this policy effective the task of saying whether or not a man should be retained at his desk or his bench, was assigned to the superior and not the local boards. The bulk of exemptions will be for physical unfitness, and on account of dependents, and considera-

Canadian Vessel's Guns Sink Submarine in Mediterranean

TORONTO, July 16.—The Canadian freight steamship Meaford sank a submarine by gunfire in the Mediterranean on June 12, according to official information from the Marine Department in London, conveyed today to the Farrar Transportation Company, Ltd., of this city, owners of the Meaford.

The steamship, says the account, had been pursued by the underwater craft and the gun crew of the freighter opened fire while the submarine was manoeuvring for position from which to discharge a torpedo.

The Meaford, commanded by Captain C. Dusting and under charter to the French Government, was on the way from Swansea to Bona, Algeria, when the battle occurred.

GUARD ANSWERS CALL TO COLORS

12TH IS AT WAR STRENGTH

2,500 Men Needed to Fill the State's Force—Negro Regiment Off to Camp Whitman.

At all the armories in this city and at the headquarters of the Sixth Division in the Municipal Building yesterday morning all the officers and men of the New York National Guard set to work on the task of mobilization and mustering preparatory to the transfer of all the State troops to the National Army. At 9 o'clock in the morning the streets around each armory were thronged with men in khaki, hurrying to fall in and answer to the roll call. This ceremony over, the real work of mustering began.

Every officer and man of the National Guard, from Major General O'Ryan, commanding the division, down to the latest private to join, must fill out a blank form in ink, giving the name of his next of kin and of the next after that, to whom he authorizes the War Department to pay, in case of his death, the six months' pay of his grade, which the law allows to the surviving relatives of any man who dies in the service of his country. These blanks must be filled out correctly, stamped, filed, and indexed before the National Guard can be sworn into the Federal service. But this is only the first step in the muster. After that every officer and man must submit to a searching physical examination and have a complete report of the result of this examination made out and filed. Then there will be the issuing and checking up of all uniforms and equipment, the stowing of such equipment as will not be taken to the training camps or to France, and the packing of the equipment that will go with each regiment.

Officers of the guard estimate that this task will take from two weeks to the entire period allowed by the War Department before the actual mustering in, scheduled to take place on Aug. 5, depending upon the special difficulties which each unit will encounter. Some of the smaller units will be completely mustered in long before that day, but some of the regiments with more than 50 per cent. of recruits among their 2,000 rank and file will need the full period. While the work of mustering goes on at the armories, however, recruiting will also go forward and General O'Ryan is confident that by the time the actual muster into the Federal service takes place every regiment in the division will be at full war strength. The Twelfth Infantry, commanded by Colonel R. L. Foster, reached war strength yesterday.

Only one regiment left the city yesterday for the mobilization. This was the newly organized Fifteenth Infantry, the negro regiment commanded by Colonel William Hayward, which must undergo Federal inspection for recognition. It has no armory of its own, and therefore will carry out its muster at Camp Whitman. It entrained for camp yesterday morning at 10, and was under canvas last night. The regiment is already at full war strength, with many reserves enrolled, and consequently does not need to remain in the city to recruit. All the other regiments, so far as known, will remain at their armories for the period taken in mustering, unless new orders for them are received in the meantime. As soon as mustered in on Aug. 5 they will entrain for the camps in the South. It is probable that authority will be granted for them to take part in a grand farewell parade through the city before then, however.

The New York National Guard as a whole is still about 2,500 men below war strength, having 89,500 officers and men in line out of a total of 42,000. The enlisted men of the guard will suffer a small loss in pay by being mustered into the Federal service, as they draw $1.25 a day from the State, and will receive only $30 a month from the nation.

There is considerable speculation among National Guard officers regarding the ultimate destination of the various regiments not included in the Sixth Division organization. Among these are the Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and Forty-seventh Infantry of New York and Brooklyn, the First Cavalry, Squadron A, and the Eighth, Ninth, and Thirteenth Coast Defense commands. It is considered possible, if not probable, that the two cavalry commands, the First and Squadron A, will ultimately be attached to the Sixth Division.

What will become of the other three infantry regiments, together with the Tenth Infantry, an up-State command, which are for the present listed as the Fourth Brigade, no one seems as yet to have any definite information. It was reported yesterday that they were to be attached to a Southern division of National Guardsmen, but the origin of this report was unknown to the authorities. There has also been talk of converting the Coast Defense commands into regiments of heavy or field artillery for European service, but this also lacks official confirmation. There was talk among the officers of a possible reorganization of the Sixth Division itself. If the two cavalry units were attached to it, it would be nearly as strong numerically as a European army corps, and some officers said the War Department was believed to be contemplating changing the American organization to approximate European standards.

TEUTON RESERVES CHECK RUSSIANS IN SOUTH GALICIA

RUSSIANS HOLD EAST END

916 AUSTRIANS CAPTURED

LONDON, July 16.—While according to a Central News dispatch from Rome quoting advices received by the Idea Nationale from Petrograd reports the capture of Dolina, in Lower Galicia, by the portion of the Russian army under General Korniloff which crossed the Lomnica River near its confluence with the Dniester and drove the Austrians from Kalusz, no confirmation of this has been received here from the Russian capital. Dolina is the next important town after Kalusz on the railroad to Stryj and the oil fields at Drohobycz. In hard fighting in the Lomnica region to the south, however, the Russians drove the Austrians out of the village of Lodziany, and finally retained possession of the eastern end of it.

During the operations yesterday General Korniloff's forces took 16 officers and 900 men, together with a number of machine guns. From July 1 to July 13, 834 officers and 35,809 men were captured by the Russians, with 93 heavy and light guns, 29 trench mortars, 493 machine guns, 43 mine throwers, 45 bomb mortars, 3 fire throwers, 2 airplanes, and much equipment.

Western Front—On the Lower Lomnica there have been fusillades and artillery bombardments. Northeast of Kalusz the Germans since morning have made energetic attempts to throw back our troops on the Lomnica. The Kinburn Regiment, weak in numbers but strong in courage, against which the principal German forces were thrown, repelled the attacks. The commander of the brave regiment, Lieut. Col. Simoviky, was wounded. After this, led by the regimental commanders' assistant, the gallant Captain Khipoff, the Kinburners advanced and threw back the enemy, inflicting losses upon him and capturing prisoners and machine guns.

The battle on the Landes-Reuldzian-Krasna front continued all day. After a severe engagement the Austrians were driven out of the village of Lodziany and pressed hard to the River Lomnica, but owing to attacks by newly-arrived enemy reserves from the direction of Rozniazov, and in view of the great losses among our officers, our troops were compelled to retire a short distance and intrench themselves in the eastern end of the above-mentioned village, (Lodziany.)

Rumanian Front—In the region of the River Oituz one of our scouting parties on its arrival at the enemy's trenches was subjected to an attack by twenty Germans. The officers fought their way back, carrying the body of a dead soldier.

Caucasus Front—Southwest of Gumuskhaneh our troops beat off three Turkish attacks in the region of the Garran Summit. In the direction of Panjwin, after an engagement, we stopped a Turkish advance.

BERLIN, July 16, (via London.)—The section of today's German official statement dealing with the operations on the Russian front says there was lively fighting in the Riga sector and in the region south of Dvinsk. The statement follows:

Between the Baltic and the Carpathians lively fighting occurred only at Riga and south of Dvinsk. In the wooded Carpathians Russian raiding detachments were repulsed repeatedly. On the Rumanian plains the fire increased in some sectors toward evening. At the Danube delta Bulgarian posts on Saturday repulsed a Russian surprise attack.

The evening communication issued by the War Office says.

VIENNA, July 16, (via London.)—The official statement from Austrian Headquarters today reads:

Eastern Theatre—In the wooded Carpathians and south of the Dniester advances attempted by the enemy's reconnoitring detachments were repulsed. Otherwise there were no events of importance.

PARIS, July 16.—The following report of operations on the Macedonian front was issued by the War Office tonight:

Eastern Theatre, July 15.—In the Vardar sector a strong enemy patrol advancing in the direction of our lines was repulsed by a fusilade. Between Monastir and Lake Ochrida an enemy airplane was brought down by a British machine and fell in flames near Angista.

Zeppelin Building Stops, Airplanes in Their Place

SOLDIERS MOBBED IN LOWER CANADA

Anti-Conscription Agitation Grows and Riots Occur in Montreal and Quebec.

RUN ON BANKS STARTED

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, July 16.—Signs multiply that the struggle here against conscription will be bitter. Yesterday fifteen thousand people who had assembled to hear the Mayor reiterate his views against conscription turned and mobbed Colonel Rexford when he denounced as false allegations made by Alphonse Serville, the Labor M. P., reflecting unpleasantly upon the Canadian soldiers now in England.

Colonel Rexford and a soldier in uniform with him were rushed to a street car near by under police escort, but as they went some of the mob kicked them on the shins. Colonel Rexford demanded that the police arrest these men, but they refused. Then when the Colonel and soldier were safe on the street car, which they had entered by the customary rear entrance, the motorman let in members of the mob by the front door, and for a time it looked as if there would be a fight. However, the mob contented themselves with throwing stones and breaking the car windows.

The Mayor of Montreal was a witness of this scene. After the departure of Colonel Rexford he returned to the platform and called for three cheers for the King, "To show that we are loyal British subjects."

While this demonstration was in progress in Montreal P. E. Blondin, who recently resigned as Postmaster General and enlisted to form a French Canadian brigade, was the object of an attack on a ferry boat below Quebec City. The steamboat officials had to protect him from the mob aboard, and on landing, it was with difficulty that he escaped from the crowd.

Mederic Martin in Montreal and Armand Lavergne in Quebec are both making continuous appeal to the public to resist service abroad. Yesterday Lavergne told a Quebec crowd that the best way to fight the Government and prevent conscription was to withdraw their savings from the banks. Many acted on the suggestion with the result that there was a steady drain on the banks in the country districts today, people withdrawing in many instances the savings of years. The same campaign has been fomented here for weeks, and there have been considerable withdrawals by the French Canadian section of the population in the east end of this city. It has not had any effect upon the political situation, but it appeals to the excitable and easily impressed imagination of the French Canadian inhabitant.

It is said on excellent authority that Sir Wilfrid Laurier told Sir Robert Borden a short time ago that he would not undertake to keep his followers within bounds if the Government forced conscription into effect without an appeal to the country. The Liberals at Ottawa, divided among themselves, are turning to the Provincial Premier, Sir Lomer Gouin, who has been the recipient of appeals from them that he personaly address a petition on behalf of Quebec Province to the Imperial Government, requesting it to prohibit an extension of Parliament or application of conscription before the country has had a chance to express itself at the polls.

DENMAN HOLDS UP GOETHALS' START ON SHIP PROGRAM

Sends Letter Calling for Explanations on Day Beginning Was to be Made.

SAYS HE IS RESPONSIBLE

PROBLEM FOR PRESIDENT

Belief That Mr. Wilson Will Act Decisively in Settling New Issues as to Authority.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The shipbuilding controversy burst out again today, and as a result Major Gen. Goethals, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, did not take steps to commandeer shipping now on the stocks and speed its construction, or to let contracts for two big Government-owned plants which he hoped to use for the immediate building of fabricated steel ships.

How long the program will be tied up no one was willing to predict tonight, but there is a general feeling that President Wilson cannot keep his hands off for many hours, and must act decisively this time, unless an agreement is reached forthwith between the factions, headed by General Goethals and William Denman, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board. It is no secret here that the situation is developing something akin to a scandal, because of allegations that the building of cargo ships is being delayed.

The latest hitch came when Mr. Denman, at 8 o'clock this morning, sent to General Goethals a letter in which he asked a number of questions concerning the plan for commandeering and shipbuilding which General Goethals, as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, made public on Friday night without consulting Mr. Denman or any of his co-workers. The letter was at the office of General Goethals when he got there ready to go ahead.

Denman Asserts Responsibility.

It is understood that in the letter, though Mr. Denman would not verify this point, he made it known to General Goethals by inference or otherwise that the Shipping Board, which owns all the stock of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, was responsible to the people of the United States for the expenditure of the great sum appropriated and, therefore, as its Chairman and as President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, of which General Goethals is General Manager, he was not willing to accept the program outlined prior to a discussion of its details.

The inference in the letter to General Goethals also, it is said, was to the effect that Mr. Denman did not agree with some of the things upon which General Goethals had resolved. One of them was the price of steel ship construction, said to be $153 a ton; another was the policy of commandeering ships on the stocks, the ownership of which might be left under the Goethals arrangement with private builders, especially Great Britain, and still another was the design to be used in the construction of wooden ships, as Mr. Denman feared that the Hough design, which he felt was the only one that could speed construction, would be rejected.

The crux of the situation which led to the request by Mr. Denman that the program be held up until explained and approved, and to a renewal of the row, was the fact that in his executive order, made public Friday, in which he delegated various powers of construction and commandeering, President Wilson did not mention General Goethals, either by name or as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, as an individual responsible for the policy of commandeering ships on the stocks and the expenditure of money for new construction. President Wilson named simply the Emergency Fleet Corporation as an organization, and while General Goethals as General Manager, because of developments, felt that he would have a free hand, and was willing to accept responsibility, Mr. Denman, as President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the stock of which is owned by the Shipping Board, was left in a position where he was able to remonstrate.

General Goethals refused to make any formal statement after receiving the Denman letter. An authorized statement was obtained at his offices, however, that the program he had given in his statement to the public had been delayed temporarily at the instance of Mr. Denman.

Asks Answer to Questions.

Representatives of the Shipping Board questioned the exactness of this and refused to accept responsibility, saying that the delay was not due to the fact that Mr. Denman had requested delay, but because Mr. Goethals had failed to answer certain questions concerning his program which Mr. Denman had asked and that the Shipping Board and the Board of Directors of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which must stand responsible for the great expenditures because of the terms of President Wilson's executive order, were unable to discuss, approve or reject the program until these questions were answered.

Chairman Denman made this statement:

DISSATISFACTION OPENLY VOICED IN BERLIN; HINDENBURG STILL FOR 'GERMAN PEACE'; CROWN PRINCE LEAVES BERLIN A VICTOR

Kaiser Thanks Bethmann for "Eminent Loyalty;" Accepts His Resignation With "Heavy Heart"

THE HAGUE, July 16.—The Berlin Reichsanzeiger, a copy of which has been received here, publishes an autographic letter from Emperor William to Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg on the occasion of the acceptance of the resignation of the Imperial Chancellor. The Emperor in his letter says:

I decide with a heavy heart by today's decree to grant your request to be relieved from your office. For eight years you have occupied the highest and most responsible offices in the imperial and State services with eminent loyalty, and have successfully placed your brilliant powers and personality at the services of the Kaiser and the empire and the King and the Fatherland.

In the most grievous times that have ever fallen to the lot of the German countries and peoples—times in which decisions of paramount importance for the existence and future of the Fatherland have had to be taken—you have stood by my side with counsel and aid. It is my heart's desire to express my most cordial thanks for your faithful service.

REGARD MICHAELIS AS MILITARY TOOL

HOPE OF PEACE VANISHES

Vigorous and Successful Prosecution of War Urged as More Vital Than Ever.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 16.—The interpretation most generally placed in well-informed quarters here upon the appointment of Dr. Michaelis as Imperial German Chancellor is its thinly disguised military dictatorship. One of the very highest authorities on foreign affairs in England said today:

"My personal opinion is it is not a good sign. What it looks like is that the Chancellorship has been filled with a tool of Ludendorff, who is really the big man in German affairs. Ludendorff stands for the peace with annexations party in Germany and if Michaelis is put there as an instrument of Ludendorff's that looks as though the worst side of German influence were still working powerfully."

Though the British Foreign Office is necessarily without full information regarding the German crisis, THE NEW YORK TIMES learned today that the following version of the fall of Bethmann Hollweg has been received from a well-posted source. In order to meet the demand for the democratization of the Constitution, a proposal was advanced for setting up a new body as intermediary between the Chancellor and the Reichstag, this new body to be called the Reichsrat. Bavaria supported the idea.

Had the internal political organization of Germany stood by itself von Bethmann Hollweg might have won the day and obtained for his country the promise of a further step in the direction of constitutional reform. The domestic problem, however, is indissolubly bound up with the question of peace terms. Bethmann Hollweg contended for a program of peace without indemnities or annexations, but the Crown Prince, Hindenburg, and Ludendorff insisted on the peace with annexations and indemnities view.

Bavaria in this case backed the Pan-German argument. Austria, who was consulted, signified a somewhat reluctant assent to what is known as the Hindenburg peace on receiving definite assurances from Berlin that the U-boat warfare was certain to force England to her knees before America could make her weight felt, and that consequently the Central Powers would be in position to make peace on their own terms.

HAS FORMED NO PROGRAM

BERLIN, July 14, (via London, Delayed.)—With the choice of Dr. Michaelis the Kaiser has clearly shown that he fully understands the present situation in Germany, and is willing to abide by the signs of the times; for his new Chancellor certainly cannot be identified with the old junker régime. His political convictions may be summed up in these words: "He is an honest, indefatigable servant of the Empire."

Any of the great parties would find it difficult, if not impossible, to identify Dr. Michaelis with its own particular aims and principles, and he is not known ever to have asserted himself in any partisan strife. This is all the better for his present gigantic task, for it enables all parties to work with him without fear or prejudice.

In the Reichstag and the hotels, in Unter den Linden, and in the Wilhelmplatz, wherever politicians or officials and interested civilians met, the new appointment was of course the main topic, and the general opinion was that the Kaiser could not have selected a more suitable personality.

Said to Have Demanded Free Rein.

It would probably set the blue pencil in motion if I were to reproduce any of the speculations I heard today on the new Chancellor's attitude toward the great problems before the Reichstag. I may, however, risk repeating a statement made by several members of the Reichstag belonging to various parties, to the effect that Michaelis, as they know him, would never have accepted the post unless he had received unlimited power to carry out his program looking to the improvement of conditions that threatened to become intolerable. His whole career, they say, proves that he is an inordinately gifted man.

When the war had been in progress for some time it was found necessary to organize grain rationing all over Germany. This was the work of Michaelis. The great organization created by him became the model for the rationing of all other foodstuffs and other articles necessary for daily life. When foodstuffs became scarcer and a strong hand was needed to make all resources subservient to the needs of the State, Dr.

Crown Prince Lauds Submarine Warfare As the "Last Argument of Kings"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 15, (Delayed.)—The Leipsic Illustrirte Zeitung has issued a special number devoted to submarine propaganda, with autograph replies of Germany's leaders to requests for their opinions.

The Crown Prince says:

"Borne upon the nation's confidence, with warmest wishes for favoring gales, upon their bridges the nation's best, for their crews are served by crews despising death, hated and feared by our foe and ready ever for deeds of daring, may our submarines ever float the German flag victoriously through the seven seas and teach respect for them as the last argument of Kings!"

Hindenburg writes:

"The submarine warfare works; enough said!"

"Untersee Boot, England's Tod," (The submarine, England's death.)

Admiral Capelle says:

"A success up to date and constantly growing in strength, our submarine war gives us a secure guarantee that these, in conjunction with our victorious army, will smash England's determination to destroy us, and that we shall victoriously come through the fight forced upon us for the existence and future of our fatherland."

Admiral von Holzendorf, Chief of the Amiralty Staff, says:

"By her methods of sea warfare England planned for Germany unparalleled misery and degradation. In common with the whole navy, I am firmly convinced that our submarines will decisively assist in bringing this plan to nought."

Admiral von Tirpitz writes:

"Neither overconfidence, which may beget unfounded and dangerous optimism, nor yet lack of confidence, must be the characteristic of Germans today. We must not expect to achieve against a tough and determined enemy such successes in a short time as can actually only be attained with the aid of equal toughness and determination, and after a hard struggle."

"Weddingen and Hershing, commanding the U-9 and U-21, were pioneers in the struggle for the abolition of English naval tyranny. We are less afraid than ever of England's invincibles and dreadnoughts."

Admiral von Schroeder, commanding at Bruges, writes:

"The submarine war shows the high strategic value of the Belgian coast and its indispensability to us, now and in the future, for the protection of the empire."

REICHSTAG LEFT IN DARK

FURTHER LIGHT ON CRISIS

MICHAELIS TO STATE POLICY

Report That Party Leaders Insist on Peace Declaration Despite Hindenburg Conference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 15, (Delayed.)—Bitter disappointment at the results of the German struggle for democratic liberty and control by the people of their own destinies is expressed by the Berliner Tageblatt in an angry editorial regarding Dr. Michaelis's appointment, which, it appears, was effected with exactly the same disregard of the desires of the Reichstag leaders which has previously characterized Chancellor appointments. The paper says:

"Not one word of this appointment was said to the Reichstag leaders. They were only invited in ways that lie outside all constitutional institutions to give their opinion of Bethmann Hollweg. The Kaiser neither received them nor heard their wishes or proposals."

The Tageblatt then points out that it is hardly a good sign that the night before the announcement of his appointment Michaelis was warmly recommended by the Tägliche Rundschau, the chief organ of the Pan-Germans, reactionaries and annexationists. The paper adds:

"The fact remains that Michaelis has been imposed upon the people from High Olympus. We are a long way yet from the parliamentary system, from the sharing of power and responsibility, and from parliamentary control. Everything happens according to tradition, with the collaboration of all sorts of factors to the exclusion only of the people's representatives. Chancellor Michaelis comes without the representatives of the great German people having exercised the slightest influence in the choice of the man who is to control the destinies of the country in its hour of fate."

To such comment it is unnecessary to add anything unless it be the sarcastic cry of the Socialist minority to Schiedemann & Co.:

"Your precious bloodless revolution ends in sand."

Bethmann Fought for Democracy.

AMSTERDAM, July 16.—The events of the last few days have stirred Berlin as the city has not been stirred since the war began, according to information reaching here. The man in the street took tremendous interest in the great political battle going on behind the scenes, and, although the exact issues between the two great groups of combatants were veiled from the "common people," the latter nevertheless quickly gained the impression that Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, as champion of popular reforms, had entered the lists against the Emperor, the Crown Prince, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, and General Ludendorff.

It was almost the first time that von Bethmann Hollweg had figured in the Berlin streets as a popular hero, and, although his cause had many friends, popular opinion regarded his effort as hopeless against the great prestige of the Imperial house, allied with the Military Imperialists, von Hindenburg and Ludendorff.

Von Bethmann Hollweg's chief support in his brief effort for democracy seems to have come from Bavaria and Austria, as the report goes here. He made two proposals, the first that in the direction of democratization a new body under the name of the Reichsrat should be immediately constituted, which would be a sort of Committee of National Defense and would for the time being act as a go-between twixt the Reichstag and the Emperor, thus instituting on a modified scale the principle of parliamentary responsibility; the second that the Government should immediately make an authoritative declaration of "no annexations or indemnities." Both these proposals, it is asserted, had the backing of Bavaria and Austria, although Austria, naturally, had no open voice in the matter, which was purely a German internal affair.

Both proposals were violently opposed by the Crown Prince, von Hindenburg, and Ludendorff. It is declared that von Hindenburg came out openly for a "German peace," and avowed that Bavaria and Austria must be persuaded that a victorious peace was certain in a short time through the agency of the U-boats.

Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg resigned from his post of Chancellor after his conference with the Crown Prince, in which the latter convinced the Chancellor that his cause was lost.

A Berlin telegram to an Amsterdam news agency quotes the Tageblatt to the effect that the Catholic Centre Party in the Reichstag has decided, with two dissenting votes, to make a declaration in favor of peace efforts, without regard to the attitude of the National Liberals.

According to the Tageblatt, the Reichstag party leaders, after they had been received by Marshal Hindenburg and General Ludendorff, held a conference in the Reichstag buildings and decided to maintain the terms of peace resolutions agreed on before the interview.

The Düsseldorf General Anzeiger says that a bill to reform the Upper House will be submitted to the Prussian Diet with the Suffrage Reform bill.

Michaelis to Speak on Thursday.

COPENHAGEN, July 16.—Dr. Georg Michaelis, the new Chancellor, will deliver his maiden speech in the Reichstag Thursday. The address is expected to contain an announcement of his forthcoming program, and is awaited with a great deal of interest.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff, who were summoned to Berlin by Emperor William, are continuing their conferences with party leaders. Dr. Michaelis is participating in them.

Representatives of the Berlin press were received Saturday by General Ludendorff, who discussed the military situation. He said the situation on all fronts was favorable.

The Pan German independent League met and adopted a resolution of protest against the proposed peace action of the Reichstag majority, declaring the adoption of the majority program would result in the indefinite continuance of the war and the political and economic ruin of the Germans.

The Berlin Boersen Courier says it understands that Chancellor Michaelis will accept the Reichstag majority peace resolution.

The Lokal-Anzeiger, on the other hand, says that Dr. Michaelis and Field Marshal von Hindenburg, at a reception to the Conservative and National Liberal members of the Reichstag, showed full accord in views which it is hard to reconcile with the sober-sense Courier's unconfirmed assertion, considering von Hindenburg's oft-repeated statement that the peace must correspond with the sacrifices made.

A later edition of the Lokal-Anzeiger received here asserts that Chancellor Michaelis is for the foreign policy and peace terms expounded by Field Marshal von Hindenburg and the Pan German camp. It quotes Conservative and National Liberal members of the Reichstag who attended yesterday's conference with von Hindenburg, General Ludendorff, First Quartermaster General, and Dr. Michaelis as being most favorably impressed with the results of the conference.

The Lokal-Anzeiger asserts of its own knowledge that Dr. Michaelis has already established relations of absolute unanimity and co-operation with these military-political chieftains. The newspaper strongly recommends to Dr. Michaelis and Parliament the postponement until the end of the war of the settlement of all contentious internal questions, including, naturally, Prussian suffrage reform, thereby properly rebuking what it terms impertinent interference from enemy countries in the internal affairs of Germany and demonstrating the unity of the country.

The Hamburg Fremdenblatt recommends the taking of the peace resolution for similar reasons.

The Chancellor informed the Reichstag members that his speech on Thursday would deal with his foreign and internal policy.

Michaelis Devoutedly Religious.

A strong strain of religious devotion, verging on religious mysticism, is one of the outstanding characteristics of Dr. Michaelis. According to those acquainted with him, the new Chancellor believes in the direct guidance and inspiration of the Deity in daily affairs, and endeavors to base his actions and policy upon his interpretation of the Divine Will.

Dr. Michaelis's firmness of purpose is said to be due largely to this conviction. This view of life is partly hereditary. His brother became a clergyman of the most devout school and his sister married a clergyman. Newspapers of evangelical trend, like the Tagliche Rundschau, emphasize this characteristic.

Dr. Michaelis is the father of a family of a size encouraged by Emperor William. He had six children, but one son has been killed in the war. Two daughters are engaged in public welfare work, and the third daughter is in charge of a soldiers' convalescent home.

SEES IN MICHAELIS AN ENEMY OF REFORM

COPENHAGEN, July 16.—If the German press correctly reflects public opinion on the event, the appointment of Georg Michaelis as Imperial Chancellor will be associated with the death of the movement to parliamentarize the imperial administration by giving Reichstag members seats either in the Cabinet or in a new controlling body to be created, such as the proposed Imperial Council of Representatives.

The press of Bavaria and other States in the empire was quick to point out that a Parliamentary Ministry could not be introduced without upsetting the whole federal character of the empire, which finds expression in the supreme Bundesrat. The alternative idea, which Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg actually considered for a time, namely, the institution of an Imperial Council, consisting of five representatives each of the Government, the Bundesrat, and the Reichstag, to serve as a connecting link between the Government and the representative institutions of the nation, has been dropped, according to the Catholic newspaper Germania.

Consider the Reichstag Ignored.

The Vossische Zeitung, the Tageblatt, and Vorwärts call attention to the fact that the appointment of Dr. Michaelis was made without previously sounding Parliament and that the new Chancellor accepted the post without consultation with the party leaders or an attempt to learn whether his proposed policy was acceptable to the Reichstag, and consider this confirmatory evidence that the Reichstag's desire for formal acknowledgment of Parliamentary control of the old Government was ignored.

The Vossische Zeitung points out that to establish the principle of Parliamentary control the Reichstag has only to exercise it, and says that the responsibility for the present irresponsible system rests with the Reichstag, which lacks the vigor, initiative, and unity to impose its will upon the appointing of officials.

This newspaper asserts that without this determination it is useless to write the Parliamentary principle into the Constitution, while with it a formal declaration would be unnecessary, as the Reichstag would always be able to displace an unsatisfactory Chancellor or Minister.

Distrust Michaelis as a Bureaucrat.

The Liberal newspapers now assume that Dr. Michaelis, in his underlying political views, is a moderate Conservative and cannot have failed in his almost forty years' career in the Prussian bureaucracy to absorb the prevailing political tenets of that caste. They say that above all, however, he is a bureaucrat and not a politician by training, and that it remains to be seen how he will develop in an office requiring a politician and not a bureaucrat.

The Vossische Zeitung unintentionally points a finger at this weak spot in the appointment by maintaining that Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg was not qualified for the post of Chancellor because he was a bureaucrat and not a political leader.

Dr. Michaelis has already been showered with instructions by newspaper advisers. Vorwärts declares that it is indispensable to effect a clear separation of the political and military fields, confine the military administration to its proper functions and restore to the political administration its proper dominant rôle.

The new Chancellor responds by calling Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff into his first conferences with the Reichstag leaders.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung tells the Chancellor that he must realize as a financial expert that a big indemnity is necessary, and suggests that he drop Prussian franchise reform.

Blame for Retiring Chancellor.

In their reviews of the administration of the retiring German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the German newspapers comment prominently and often in an uncomplimentary manner on his treatment of relations with America. In the Vossische Zeitung, Georg Bernhard openly accuses Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg and his Foreign Secretary, Dr. Zimmermann, of having played a double game with Washington, making war inevitable by attempts to deceive and mislead President Wilson in regard to the policy and intentions of Germany.

Herr Bernhard intimates that the submarine policy, if managed skillfully, might not have led to war with the United States had not these diplomats artificially increased the danger and destroyed every chance of avoiding a break. He says they encouraged the idea of mediation by President Wilson in America, but did nothing to make it acceptable at home; that they launched the proposal to turn Mexico against the United States while negotiating with Mr. Wilson, and arranged the dinner to Ambassador Gerard and approved the text of the speeches delivered at the dinner, and then astounded the President and the Ambassador with the submarine note. As to this note, Herr Bernhard says much more might be written if patriotic considerations did not forbid. After all these acts, he concludes, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg followed the customary course and attempted to unload the entire responsibility on the former German Ambassador at Washington, Count von Bernstorff.

Vorwärts comments on the retirement of the Chancellor in a manner similar to the Vossische Zeitung, saying:

"We must get away from the ambiguity and lack of clarity which have given Germany's foreign policy the reputation of dishonesty."

The newspaper demands that the new Chancellor declare plainly whether his peace program is one of conquest or not. It says there can be no middle ground.

The Berlin Tageblatt and the Frankfurter Zeitung share the friendly appreciation of Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg as expressed in the official article concerning his resignation printed in the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. Other newspapers, however, unsparingly criticise the department Chancellor as having been a weak though well-intending official, who did excellently in subordinate posts, but was unable to see his own lack of qualification for a position of chief responsibility during a tremendous war.

Demands Power for Parliament.

AMSTERDAM, July 16.—The Tageblatt of Berlin says the new Chancellor must guarantee personally and by his actions that he has made up his mind to prepare to give Parliament full power to control future events and assume responsibility for them.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung asserts that the burden of Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg's incapacity prevented the German nation from breathing, and that danger of actual suffocation was not far removed. Moreover, he was unable to find a way to advance the cause of peace.

Notwithstanding the political crisis, says the Catholic Germania, the nation remains determined not to end the war until a happy conclusion is assured.

The Socialist organ, Vorwärts, says that the Socialists, in co-operation with the future Government, are willing to raise Germany to the level of the freest countries of the world and support a durable peace.

A Correction from Harnack.

Professor von Harnack has informed the Frankfurter Zeitung that the published version of his letter purporting to reveal the views of the former German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, was erroneous. He states that the opinions attributed to the former Chancellor were, in reality, his own views, and that these were distorted.

The Bavarian Kurier published last week what was termed "a sensational revelation" to the effect that Professor von Harnack had published an account of an interview with Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, who was represented as saying that his views approximated those of prominent German Socialists; that the greatest danger was from Germans who continued to believe in victory, and that at the best the war could result only in a draw.

ITALIAN VIEW OF CRISIS.

War Must Be Pushed Till German Reactionaries Surrender.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 16.—The advent of Dr. Michaelis, who is considered as the representative of extreme reactionary and conservative Prussianism, and the assumption by the Crown Prince of practically the highest power and responsibility, with the report that Hindenburg and Ludendorff forced the retirement of Bethmann Hollweg by threatening otherwise to resign themselves, are taken here to mean that the Emperor and ex-Chancellor to save the situation of Germany by reluctant concessions to the spirit of democracy has failed, at any rate, for the present.

It is thought that by these concessions the Emperor and Bethmann Hollweg hoped possibly to lessen the irreconcilable divergence between the point of view of the Central Powers and the Entente Allies, and that they may also have sought to let German public opinion down easily to the idea that submarine warfare and the importance of America's entrance into the war.

The view now held here is that, as the German war party, the intransigeants and the agrarians are the only parties likely in the near future to make their voices heard, the only argument remaining for the Entente Allies is that of hard blows and persistent pressure in order that even the reactionaries will finally realize that they must face the logic of facts and yield to the will of the long-suffering but gradually awakening German people.

BETHMANN TO WRITE BOOKS.

Will Devote His Leisure to Historical Work, It Is Said.

LONDON, July 16.—A dispatch to The Daily Dispatch from Amsterdam says that Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the retiring Imperial German Chancellor, will proceed to his estate at Hohenfinow, near Berlin, and probably devote his leisure time to historical work.

The dispatch adds that Emperor William desired to offer the former Chancellor a high diplomatic post abroad after the war, but that the suggestion was negatived.

GERMAN POTATO CROP BAD.

Expected to be Smallest Since the Beginning of the War.

PARIS, July 16.—The Intelligence Department of the United States Army has perfected a method for obtaining the quick delivery of translations from German newspapers with the purpose of supplementing other channels of information concerning internal conditions in Germany.

Papers recently received report a big wheat crop in Rumania, much of which, it is expected, will be transported to Germany. The vegetable crop in Germany, with the exception of potatoes, is reported by the German press to be good. The German fruit crop is bad, and the potato crop is expected to be the smallest since the beginning of the war.

Anti-Jewish Riot in Kiev.

False charges that the Jewish merchants in Kiev were concealing food supplies nearly caused a "pogrom" there, according to a special cable to the Jewish Warheit from its Petrograd correspondent. A few Jews were wounded in the disorders, which were, however, suppressed as soon as they began. Petrograd and other places have also been the scenes of anti-Semitic propaganda, and the Central Committee of the All-Russian Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies has sent out fifteen representatives through the country to conduct a widespread campaign against the "pogrom" propagandists.

HEAR CROWN PRINCE DICTATES AT BERLIN

KAISER'S PRESTIGE WANES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16. — Dispatches received in Washington from official and semi-official sources concerning the situation in Germany seem to leave no room for doubt that the Crown Prince has attained an ascendency in the Imperial councils which means a curtailment of the prestige and authority of Emperor William and indicates his ultimate retirement. Leaders of the Militarist Party under Field Marshal Hindenburg and General Ludendorff, who recognize the Crown Prince as the Imperial family's representative of their policies, appear to have gained complete control of the Government, and it is believed that this faction dictated the appointment of Dr. Georg Michaelis as Imperial Chancellor to succeed von Bethmann Hollweg.

The preliminary reforms agreed to by the Emperor and the Crown Council are couched in such uncertain terms that they are regarded as meaning nothing or as requiring a suspension of judgment as to their scope and effect. But the internal situation affected by the reputed granting of these reforms decreases in interest beside the retirement of Bethmann Hollweg and the victory of the group that has advocated the policy of frightfulness.

Although high officials of the Washington Government continue to put out the view that there is no ground for optimism on the part of the Allies in what has happened in Germany, in some quarters where opinion is usually sound the feeling prevails that a continuation of the ruthless military program is contrary to the spirit of the demand in the Reichstag for a new deal and will arouse sentiment that will vent itself in a new political crisis. That many of the German people are as sick of the war as their Austrian neighbors is well understood here.

As to the effect of the change of Government at Berlin on the attitude of Austria-Hungary, officials are inclined to believe that the Vienna Government is so thoroughly under the domination of Germany that the strong desire of the Austro-Hungarian Emperor and people to make an earnest bid for peace will not be manifested while Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and the Crown Prince are in control of affairs. The State Department has information that General von Falkenhayn, who was succeeded by Hindenburg as Chief of the German Military Staff, is in command of the Austrian campaign on the Italian front and that throughout the Austrian governmental establishment German officials, nominally occupying junior positions, are in real control. For this reason officials here do not believe that Emperor Charles will dare to make any effort for peace that is not sanctioned by Germany.

Crown Prince as Dictator.

The most direct and what appears to be the most authentic news of the German political situation comes in a semi-official dispatch received in Washington from Rome today. This says that Italy will not enter into any negotiations whatever with the reorganized German Government. This dispatch throws new light on the intervention of the Crown Prince in the political crisis. It indicates that the will of the Crown Prince is beginning to prevail over the powerful influence of Emperor William. The dispatch reads:

"A transference of power from the Emperor to the Crown Prince appears to be in course. This does not mean that the Emperor will abdicate, but that the war party in Germany is now more powerful than ever. The Crown Prince was the chief proponent of the Pan-German Agragrians, who were principally responsible for the war. With the influence of this party in the ascendent, there is no hope for the democratization of Germany. It is expected, on the contrary, that an even more militaristic and autocratic rule than that which heretofore has obtained in Germany will prevail.

"There is no likelihood that under the influence of the Crown Prince the German people will be allowed to express their own convictions and opinions. The war will go on with the German idea of annexations and indemnities prevailing.

"The latest move, of which so much has been said lately, is an enormous German fraud by which the allied countries will not be deluded. The German political crisis was created to impress the outside world. It is time that all belligerents were warned that the Allies will not accept any proposal of peace unless it is in accordance with the principles declared over and over again by the allied Governments.

"The selection of the new Imperial German Chancellor shows very plainly what the course of German politics is going to be. Italy is determined more than ever not to enter into any negotiations with the reorganized German Government."

Hungary's Outlook Changing.

In well informed official circles here it was said that Emperor Charles was alive to the situation in Hungary, where there is a growing separatist movement, and in Bohemia, where the Czechs are sullen and threaten trouble for the empire. Hungary is beginning to feel that Russia, which has undergone a revolution that put liberal minded men in control of her foreign policies, is no longer the menace which made the war popular in Hungary when Russia was imperial.

German and Austrian peace aims are not alike, it was explained, in that Austria now would be content with a peace which guaranteed her the integrity of her territories, having renounced conquest and indemnity. Austria has sought to induce Germany to proclaim war aims, but in this has been wholly unsuccessful.

Intelligence reaching Washington indicates that Germany has treated Austria with little consideration, but has not driven the Vienna Government to a consideration of a separate peace. Berlin's overbearing attitude, however, has irritated Austrians of every degree, and an interesting situation has been created, which, it is predicted will require the application of Germany's resources to prevent embarrassment to her.

COAL STRIKES IN GERMANY.

Miners Angry Over Food Restrictions and the Labor Law.

COPENHAGEN, July 16.—Extensive strikes are reported to be in progress in the Silesian and Rhine coal fields of Germany.

The trouble has arisen over the food restrictions and objections to the labor service law.

GERMAN BLOWS FAIL IN CHAMPAGNE HILLS

RHEIMS SHELLED AGAIN

Berlin Says British Attacks Near Belgian Coast Were Repulsed.

PARIS, July 16.—The German troops in Champagne made a determined effort last night to retake the positions in the Moronvilliers range of hills captured by the French on July 14. The bombardment which preceded the attack was particularly violent in the neighborhood of Mont Haut and the height known as the Teton.

The Germans threw strong forces against the French positions, but at the Ttton they were forced back with heavy losses. At Mont Haut the Germans gained some advantages. They succeeded in retaking a part of their trenches, but the French, in a counter-attack, drove them out again. The fighting, which lasted all night, was of a very desperate nature. Those of the enemy who succeeded in penetrating the French positions were annihilated.

The text of the afternoon statement follows:

Between the Somme and the Aisne the enemy delivered a series of strong attacks, preceded by bombardments. Three attempts in the vicinity of St. Quentin were broken up by our fire. South of Corbeny several detachments of shock troops attacked our outposts. After a very spirited engagement, the enemy was repulsed completely. For our part, we made progress south of Ailles and took prisoners.

In Champagne, after a very violent bombardment in the region of Mont Haut and the Teton, the Germans hurled important forces against the positions we conquered on July 14. Our troops resisted with indomitable energy and tenacity the attack of an enemy greatly superior in numbers. At the Teton the efforts of the enemy were without success. The attacking forces, which suffered very heavy losses, were not able to cut into our lines.

At Mont Haut there was a violent action, which continued all through the night. The enemy, who succeeded at first in recapturing a large part of the ground we had won, was hurled back by our troops in a brilliant counterattack. Certain trench elements are all that remain in the enemy's hands.

The official communication issued tonight reads:

Moderate artillery actions occurred north of Brayé-en-Lannois and near Hurtebise; they were quite violent northwest of Rheims.

In Champagne the fighting during the night at Mont Haut ended in a check for the Germans, who were not able to regain the ground conquered by us on that with. The attacks last night were very violent and murderous for the enemy. Three waves were launched by the adversary, two of them being mowed down by our fire. Only one succeeded in penetrating our lines. In desperate fighting, which lasted until dawn, our troops annihilated the enemy detachments and retook possession of all their gains.

Sixteen hundred shells were fired into Rheims, two old men being killed.

The artillery action was very spirited in the whole region and the artillery was also active on the left bank of the Meuse.

Say British Attacks Failed.

BERLIN, July 16, (via London.)—Three attempts made by the British yesterday morning to recapture the positions won by the Germans at Lombaertzyde, on the Belgian front, says an official statement issued today by the German War Department, were repulsed with heavy losses to the attackers. The text of the statement reads:

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: Yesterday morning the English attempted by three successive attacks to recapture the positions they lost at Lombaertzyde. They were repulsed every time with heavy losses. The artillery fire, moderate throughout the day, increased in the evening on the coast and the Yser to the Lys to strong artillery duels, which also were lively throughout the night.

From La Bassée Canal to the southern bank of the Scarpe the artillery activity increased during the late hours of the day. Northeast of Lens and at Fresnoy strong English reconnoitring detachments were driven back.

Army group of the German Crown Prince: Violent though fruitless attacks were made by the French in an attempt to recapture the positions taken by us south of Courteçon. The French suffered heavy losses there and in similarly fruitless attacks south of La Bovelle Farm. An enemy advance south of Sillerie, in the Vesle Valley, also failed.

In Western Champagne some of our first-line trenches remained in the hands of the enemy at the conclusion of the night's fighting. Although on Hochberg the trenches we recaptured in the evening could not be maintained, we succeeded on the Poehlberg in reaching our old lines again after bitter hand-to-hand fighting. A considerable number of prisoners and a few machine guns were brought in from both battlefields.

Army group of Duke Albrecht: There was spirited artillery fighting between the Meuse and the Moselle. A reconnoitring operation at Remenauville met with good success. We took numerous prisoners.

Raids Along the British Front.

LONDON, July 16.—The official report from British Headquarters in France tonight reads:

We carried out a successful raid early this morning east of Vermelles. Our line has been advanced slightly northeast of Messines. The hostile artillery has shown increased activity southwest of Lens and in the neighborhood of Armentières.

Three German airplanes were brought down yesterday in the air fighting. Three of our machines are missing.

The following was issued early today: Hostile raids were repulsed last night with loss to the enemy northwest of Fontaine-lez-Croisilles and in the neighborhood of Armentières.

We made a successful raid near Oppy. A few prisoners were taken by us.

Released to Fly in France.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 16.—Four members of the aviation division in training here received an honorable discharge yesterday in order to permit them to go to France immediately to serve in the Lafayette Flying Squadron. The men are Drummond B. Cannon and Francis Draper Crosby of New York, R. Nobles Estes of Providence, and Harry W. Seeley of Connecticut.

STUNTS OF THE TANKS AMAZE KING GEORGE

They Climb Over Trenches and Through Woods, and He Takes Ride in One.

SEES WAR'S NEW TERRORS

Exhibitions of Flame Throwing and the Use of Gas Given for Him.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sunday, July 5.—A halt was made on the King's way during his review of his armies in France so that he might see a special show of that black art of frightfulness which has steadily increased the horrors of war since that day when the enemy let loose clouds of poison gas upon the soldiers and civilians in Ypres. The enemy must now regret that evil chemistry of his, for the British have paid him back in his own coin.

As soon as the King arrived in the field, there was a sound of rushing air, and there shot forth a blast of red flame out of black smoke to a great distance and with a most terrifying effect. It came from an improved variety of flame projector, a machine recommended by General von Arnim himself during the battle of the Somme. Then he saw the projection of burning oil, bursting out in great waves of liquid fire. A battalion of men would be charred like burned sticks if this touched them for a second. There was another hissing noise, and there rolled very sluggishly over the field a thick, oily vapor, almost invisible as it mixed with the air, and carrying with its foul breath instant death to any man who should take a gulp of it. To such a thing have all of us come in this war for civilization.

The most spectacular show here was the most harmless to human life, being a new form of smoke barrage to conceal the movements of troops on the battlefield like those I saw in the battle of Arras and afterward in the Messines battle, and a week or two ago near Lens. Through this smoke nothing can be seen and one may be 500 yards from a great attack and have no vision of it.

From this laboratory of the black art the King went to that field of war where the machinery of war is beautiful, rising about the ugly things of this poor earth with light and grace, for this was an airdrome. As he came up three fighting planes of the fastest British type went up in chase of an imaginary enemy. They arose at an amazing speed and shot across the skyline like shadows racing from the sun. When they came back those three boys up there seemed to go a little mad and played the air with a kind of joyous carelessness of death. They tumbled over and over, came hurtling down in visible corkscrews, looped the loop very close to the earth, flattened out after headlong dives, and rose again like a swallows. The King was interested in the ages of these pilots, and laughed when they confessed to their youth, for one was 19 and another 20. He inquired about numbers of pilots by name and knew their exploits, although they are kept as secrets from the world, which knows nothing of the individual heroes of the air until they are dead.

Then the King motored away and came to a sunken field, very smooth and long, between two high wooded banks. Here there was a great surprise and a great sensation, for just as the King stepped out of his car a young tree in full foliage on the left of the field up a high bank toppled forward slowly, and then fell with a crash into the undergrowth. Something was moving in the undergrowth, something monstrous. It came heaving and tearing its way through the bushes, snapping off low branches and smashing young saplings like an elephant on stampede. Then it came into sight on top of the bank, a big gray beast, with a blunt snout, nosing its way forward, and all tangled in green leaves and twigs like a brutal Bacchus with vine leaves in his hair. It was Old Brother Tank doing his stunt before the King.

From the far end of a long, smooth field came two other twin beasts of this ilk, crawling forward in a hurry as though hungry for human blood. In front of their track at the other end of the field were two breastworks built of sand bags covering some timbered dugouts and protected from sudden attack by two belts of barbed wire. Two tanks came along like hippotamuses on a spree, one of them waiting for the other when he lagged a little behind. They hesitated for a moment before the breastworks as if disliking the effort of climbing them, then heaved themselves up, thrust out their snouts, got their hindquarters on the move, and waddled to the top. Under their vast weight the sandbags flattened out, the timber beneath slipped and cracked, and the whole structure began to collapse as the twins plunged down on the other side and advanced to attack the barbed wire. That barbed wire, so formidable to infantry, so damnable in a rush upon enemy trenches, was simply idiotic against these monsters. Its posts fell, its tangled barbs were torn like ragged threads, and it was all laid low.

Another tank now came into action from the far end of the field, bearing the legend on its breast of "Faugh-a-Ballagh," which I am told is Irish for "get out of the way." It was the Derby winner of the tanks' fleet, like the sea elephant of Kerguelen Island on a rampageous hunt. From its steel flanks guns waggled to and fro and no dragon of old renown looked half so menacing as this. St. George would have had no chance against it, not King George, whose servant it was, was not afraid and with the Prince of Wales he went through the steel trapdoor into the body of the beast. For some time we lost sight of the King and Prince, but after a while they came out laughing, having traveled around the field for ten minutes in the queerest car on earth.

The great thrill of the day came later. It was a thrill that made us all gasp, and for one terrific second feel our hearts jump into our mouths. Through the woods of a high bank on the left came a tank, looking rather worse for wear, as though battered in battle. It came forward through the undergrowth and made for the edge of the bank where there was a machine gun emplacement in a bombproof shelter, whose steep bank was almost perpendicular. It seemed impossible that any old tank should contemplate the notion of taking that jump, but this tank came steadily on until its snout was well over the bank and steadily on again with that extraordinary method of progression in which the whole body of the beast moves from the nose end upwards until it seems to have a giraffe's neck and very little else. That very little else was sitting on the top of the emplacement while the forward part of the tank was poised in space regarding the setting sun. However, without any hesitation the whole mass moved on, lurched out and nose dived. Good Lord. It was then that the thrill came. The tank plunged down like a chunk of cliff and as it fell went sideways and lost its balance and as near as anything could be, almost turned turtle. It righted itself with a great jerk at the nick of time just before it took the earth below and shaved by a hair's breath an ammunition dump at the bottom of the drop.

It was the finest tank trick I ever saw, and it was greeted with laughter and cheers. The King, however, and other spectators were rather worried about the lads inside. They must have taken a mighty toss. No sound came from the inside of the tank, and for a moments it was feared that a legion of a number of plucky fellows laid out unconscious within those steel walls. The door opened and we could see their feet standing straight, which was a relief.

"Let them all come out," said the King, laughing heartily. And out they all tumbled, a row of young fellows as merry and bright as air pilots after a good landing.

"Didn't you get a nasty knock?" asked the King. The answer was: "Not at all, Sir," which I fancy has to be taken with a grain of salt.

This scene in the tankodrome was a queer little side show of the war, as fantastic as a story by H. G. Wells. Among the spectators were some small children with big wondering eyes, who gave a great shout when the tank made its steep-nosed dive, and an old French priest, laughing with his hands to his sides, and some Flemish girls in their fete day frocks. One did not think then of the grim side of the picture, and one saw the comicality and not the terror of these engines of war.

A GAS ATTACK NEAR LENS.

Canadians Silence Concealed Battery by Novel Means.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, July 16.—The western part of Lens, particularly that known as the Cite du Moulin, was subjected to a gas attack early this morning. The first of the gas cylinders was projected to the enemy's positions about 1 o'clock, and projectiles and drums loaded with deadly vapors were sprayed upon the Germans for almost two hours. The enemy attempted to cause a cessation of the attack by putting an artillery and gas shell barrage on that part of the front from which he supposed the gas was being circulated. In this he failed, and the operations proceeded until the available drums had been discharged.

Recently, to offset operations of an enemy battery so securely protected in an underground position that a hit could not be secured, it was showered with gas shells. For fourteen hours a hurricane of the battery was silent. It required that time for the atmosphere to absorb and render harmless the gas that had filled the sunken gun pit.

There have been numerous aerial fights on this part of the front during the last twenty-four hours. In one case two of our planes tackled five of the enemy's with indecisive results. The losses recorded are one plane on each side.

advisers, backed as they were by the Austrian assent, and so Bethmann Hollweg's régime ended.

This confirms in its main points the outline of the crisis cabled to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday.

In quarters here where hopes of peace with democratized Germany had been raised by the earlier developments of the crisis it is now recognized that the victory of the military autocracy makes a vigorous and successful prosecution of the war more necessary than ever. Only a successful revolution in Germany, which is considered beyond the wildest dreams, could otherwise bring about the conclusion of a safe democracy. Both The Manchester Guardian and London Daily News, which were inclined to cherish the hopes of peace with a democratized Germany, now agree it would be the highest degree of folly for the Allies.

It is the third great victory of the Junkers in this war. Thrice has the Kaiser allowed his own judgment and that of his Chancellor to be overborne by the Crown Prince and the Junkers. First, it was at fateful Crown Council which decided on the war. The second time was when unlimited submarine warfare was adopted. The three occasions will be memorable in the chronicles of this tormented world, memorable, The Manchester Guardian predicts, in the history of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The Junkers and Generals fought the battle with Bethmann Hollweg to a finish, because democracy menaces their political all, and peace without an unquestioned victory is equally sinister. The war is their war, and if it is unsuccessful they will be called to account. Nothing short of a complete victory can hold out a promise of securing them at home. They are therefore compelled by the logic of their plight to insist upon war to the end at whatever cost. The military autocracy will now have to try to justify its faith in the sword by a supreme effort on land and sea.

Of the Kaiser's attitude in the crisis The Manchester Guardian says:

"We must know that in these latest decisions he is leading the Hohenzollern dynasty to stake all upon so remote a contingency as a crushing victory. Perhaps he has been persuaded that in any event the dynasty is involved, that the Hohenzollerns and the Junkers stand or fall together. Perhaps he is just a man who has lost his power of decision and still thinks of some far-fetched reconciliation of the German people and junker war."

ERZBERGER SWUNG BETHMANN TO REFORM

But Pan-German Influences Decided Kaiser to Drop Him for Michaelis.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, July 14, (Delayed.)—The following is the story, from an inside source, of the German political struggle as far as it has gone:

In the first place, it is necessary to consider the position and personality of Matthias Erzberger, the stone which set Germany's dynamic avalanche—for it was nothing else—in motion. He is a man of keen intelligence and high ability and has an enormous knowledge of German economic affairs, coupled with a shrewd judgment on foreign and colonial matters, about all of which he has written a great deal.

Long before the war he had been what might be termed domestic adviser and special foreign correspondent of the Chancellor. He was not slow to use this remarkable position for highly important ends. On many occasions Bethmann Hollweg employed him for missions to foreign countries regarding which a detached, non-diplomatic opinion was required. He was in Rome before the war and, indeed, till Italy's abandonment of neutrality. Coming from South Germany and representing a Roman Catholic constituency, he found it easy to establish close relationship with the Vatican.

There is not the slightest doubt that the peace feelers of the Vatican were behind him in the action he took last week in the Main Committee of the Reichstag, and that the Pope has for some time interested himself in the matter.

Erzberger's work made him a very close friend of Bethmann Hollweg, and, working cautiously and skillfully, he eventually managed to carry the Chancellor with him in his projects of domestic political reform. Whether the latter capitulated to the shrewd and capable Deputy out of conviction or for reasons of expediency some future day will reveal.

The fact remains—Excellency von Harnack's contradiction of the story of his letter notwithstanding—that he recently became prepared to yield, slowly and stubbornly to outward appearance, to the democratic program. Erzberger took his highly dramatic step, and as a result was able to point out to the Chancellor that it had obtained an unexpectedly large measure of success.

The only important person standing in the way in Berlin at the time was the Kaiser, and when Erzberger's success became apparent the one thing needful to score a victory was to rush the Kaiser. To the extent of yielding on the question of franchise reform for Prussia his Majesty was rushed; but when the military party and the anti-democratic forces in general regarded the whole affair in the light of revolution were awakening. War Minister von Stein, representing Hindenburg and Ludendorff and the whole powerful military caste, came into action, and when things grew serious those two army chiefs were called to Berlin, to reinforce them the Crown Prince was brought into the discussion, with a strong military backing.

In addition to the reactionary Bavarian forces, which are always counted for much in Germany, came to the aid of the autocracy, and the Kaiser found himself standing between two very powerful parties, both prepared for strong action, and both, when not measured by Reichstag votes, appearing to him equally powerful. He had two main choices—a practically military dictatorship or a chancellorship under which things would go in a democratic direction. He was threatened seriously in both either, so he has compromised.

In dropping Bethmann Hollweg he yielded to the Military Party and probably found no great opposition from them in appointing Michaelis, whose speeches have shown that he is a strong advocate of "Durchhalten," while the other side was evidently not averse to a man of the people, as Michaelis is, as a tertium quid for the time being.

Michaelis has not given evidence of a strong party prin with regard to the great problem facing the Fatherland, and his most likely task is that of finding a compromise. There is little hope that a compromise will solve the crisis, and on his attitude will depend the further strategy in the movement which is shaking the whole fabric of the German Empire.

Michaelis was sought out by the Kaiser and received full power. In this capacity he met obstinate resistance from certain people who held private privileges higher than the welfare of the masses, and even exerted pressure upon him through other Government authorities.

But in his famous speech in March of this year, in his capacity as Commissioner of General Food Supplies, he made it clear that he would brook no interference from anybody. "Who could possibly oppose me with any success when I am doing my duty; who would dare hamper me in my work?" he said at the time; and he has since suited his action to his words. Strategists are needed now, not only at the front, but also behind the front, and Michaelis is a strategist as well as a splendid tactician, combining with such unusual qualities those of statesmanship and indomitable will.

Hindenburg and Ludendorff were called into consultation yesterday by the Kaiser. They had previously had a conference with the leaders of all parties, who presented the needs of the time to the Generals as they saw them.

Changes in the Prussian Cabinet, as well as in the administration of the empire, may be announced at any time, but the critical situation in the Reichstag is fraught with such unusual difficulties that it may take several days and many consultations with circles which in other days were not consulted in matters of the kind before the ship of state will be fully under way again.

All the afternoon papers welcome the appointment of Dr. Michaelis most heartily. The Lokal-Anzeiger remarks that von Bethmann Hollweg's resignation was accepted on the same day as eight years ago when von Bülow made room for him. This paper says it is informed that the new Chancellor considers it his special duty to maintain unity among the parties in the empire and restore it where it has been impaired. According to the Lokal-Anzeiger, his views on this subject are thus expressed:

"The desire for unity must remain the all-powerful factor in our internal politics. Only if this is accomplished will there be the strength and confidence necessary for the Fatherland to maintain its attitude toward the world. There is no need of affirming that our policy of alliances, which has been proved in the fire of the world war, will be continued."

The paper continues:

"Views concerning his statesmanship differ widely. The great mass of the people know him mainly because of the manly speech he made as Commissioner of Food Supply in the Prussian Diet last March. This speech condemned the selfishness of the agrarians and made him very popular. He can secure the confidence of the people if he proceeds with circumspection with his great reform work."

The Vossische Zeitung says:

"His clear-headed energy and his powerful qualities have during this war given proof of extraordinary power. Days ago we pointed out that he was the one man who had the sympathy and respect of all parties, from the Left to the Right. We consider him a statesman who, on account of his greater knowledge, his temperament, and his extraordinary rhetorical talent, seems best suited to solve the difficulties of the situation. In all his various posts Dr. Michaelis has proved himself a man of unusual energy and good judgment. Besides, he is a laborer who never tires and shows no traces of fatigue in the most strenuous debates. His supreme qualities were recognized while yet in a Government office at Breslau, and his immediate transference from there to the under secretaryship of finance proves how highly his services were valued even then."

Count zu Reventlow, in the Deutsche Tageszeitung, says:

"We meet the new Chancellor with the frankest candor. We are told that his principal aim will be to restore unity among the people. We must of course wait to see how he will put his program into action, but we certainly can promise to aid him as much as possible in this aim. We know what a difficult heritage is his, and we hope with all our hearts that he will have the confidence of the Kaiser, who in these difficult times has called him to the helm of the empire. We hope he will accomplish this on a strong monarchical basis."

Hailed as a Man of Resolution.

BERLIN, July 15, (via London, Delayed.)—Commenting on the appointment of Dr. Michaelis, the Tageblatt says:

"Reports about the new Chancellor are various. He is known to the public by his energetic action in the

ATTACKS HOOVER AS ARCH GAMBLER

Rigged American Food Markets for Benefit of Belgians, Senator Reed Asserts.

WOULD LEGISLATE HIM OUT

PHELAN DEFENDS HOOVER

Says Country Won't Approve Reed's Attack—Senators Informally Modify Food Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—In debate on the Food Administration bill today Senator Reed of Missouri launched the bitterest attack he has yet made upon Herbert C. Hoover, calling upon the Senate not to pass legislation that would make a "food controller out of a gambler." The Missourian, in violent language, maintained that Mr. Hoover had used Belgium relief funds to "rig" wheat and other markets in America with the effect of putting up prices to American consumers.

"I don't charge Mr. Hoover with having gambled with this money for his own profit," explained Senator Reed, when Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, the Democratic whip, asked if he really meant to say that Mr. Hoover was a gambler, "but I do say that what he did was wrong, despicably wrong. He ran up prices on our people here to get food cheaper for the Belgians. He is the arch gambler of this day."

While Senator Reed was talking, Senator Phelan of California called Mr. Hoover on the telephone to tell of the Missourian's characterization. Later Mr. Phelan told of this, on the floor of the Senate.

"I talked with Mr. Hoover and told him what the gentleman from Missouri had said about his having gambled with the Belgium relief funds," said Mr. Phelan. "Mr. Hoover was not excited about it. Now, if Mr. Hoover gambled with these funds it was done to save the starving people of Belgium. In fact, it was no gambling at all, but an effort to get advantageous prices in the expenditure of a vast sum of money that, to go the rounds, had to be expertly handled."

Would Legislate Hoover Out.

Senator Reed made his attack on Mr. Hoover after offering a substitute amendment to the Food bill for the section creating the Food Administrator. Under Senator Reed's substitute there would be a board of five, to be appointed by the President, one of whom would be the Secretary of Agriculture, ex-officio. The others, the amendment provides, must all be "resident civilians," which restriction Senator Reed intends to apply to Mr. Hoover, whom he criticised today as having lived away from America nearly his entire life. The substitute amendment was not voted upon.

While the Food bill was being debated the joint committee of Senate leaders worked upon revision of the various amendments to which objection has been concentrated on the floor of the Senate so as to expedite the bill's passage next Saturday. Its work had been practically completed tonight and the amended sections will be offered within two days.

In the redrafted control section the committee decided to strike out cotton, steel, wool, lumber, copper, farm implements, fertilizer, hemp, jute, and sisal. These eliminations meet objections expressed on the floor.

The committee modified the section pertaining to the Advisory Commission the Council of Natinol Defense so as to limit its powers in passing upon Government contracts in which individual members have interested. No member having pecuniary interest in any contract is allowed to vote upon it, under the section as altered.

The section to license dealers in foodstuffs was toned down so as to make it less severe.

The committee agreed to allow Section 12, with the Smoot amendment in it, to remain as it is until the bill reaches conference. There the Smoot amendment will be changed to direct the President to commandeer stocks of distilled liquors in bond upon the bill becoming a law and to pay reasonable compensation to the owners. By not fixing a definite price for commandeered stocks, the feature criticised as unconstitutional would be eliminated. In the liquor legislation as it will stand, the making of beer and wines is not mentioned, just as in Section 12 as passed by the Senate two weeks ago.

Likens Hoover to Wallingford.

Senator Reed started his attack on Mr. Hoover by comparing him with the fiction character J. Rufus Wallingford, only Mr. Hoover, he said, had "gone Mr. Wallingford one better."

"I know it is lese majesté to disagree with department heads who send bills to us," Senator Reed went on. "This idea of putting Mr. Hoover in this J. Rufus Wallingford job was handed to us by the Administration. Now, I want to impress on the Senate Mr. Hoover's long residence abroad and the fact that he has been out of the United States practically since he was 23 years old. He's been so long away that he is quite a stranger here."

The Missouri Senator read from "Who's Who" that Mr. Hoover was born in West Branch, Iowa, Aug 10, 1874, and that his avocation was that of a mining engineer. He read of Mr. Hoove rorganizing mining companies in England, France, China, and South America, and said he was described as a "promoter."

"One of the firms for which he was executive head was mining in Borneo, where American Superintendents and foremen ruled over working scores of head-hunters. Perhaps that was where he got the idea of being supreme boss to regulate the diet of the American people," observed Senator Reed. "And, after spreading himself all over the country, he settled himself down in London, where he has a mansion in Kensington, and where he described himself as a 'Liberal' in politics—not a Republican, or a Democrat, or a Populist, but a Liberal.

"And in an interview recently this Mr. Hoover said he wanted to come back home so he could 'get into the big game.' He explained this was 'not the money game and not exactly the political game,' but the real game. Whatever that means I leave to Senators to interpret. The Government had been watching him, he told his interviewer, and especially, I suppose, that quiet gentleman who looks around for the President."

"Foremost War Gambler."

Senator Reed characterized Mr. Hoover as "the foremost war gambler in the wheat market." When Belgium needed wheat, he said, Mr. Hoover, with $250,000,000 of the Belgian relief funds, manipulated the Chicago market so that the price, as a result of his operations, went away up.

"He started in to speculate on beans," said Mr. Reed. "He bought 1,000 tons of beans at a low price, then, when the market went up, dumped them in. Later on he did it again. He made money on his own manipulation, but the people of this country had to pay for the fun he had out of it. America paid more for beans than the price Mr. Hoover got for Belgium through his rigging the market.

"Those in this Senate who got blackfaced with enthusiasm over Mr. Hoover's threat of the torch, scaffold, and thumbscrew for the food gamblers would do well to ponder over the fact that his own gambling in the wheat and bean market shot up prices in the American market while he was carrying on abroad. The same was true with articles of clothing, everything he gambled in.

"Now, if Joseph Leiter, recent entertainer of the Italian Princes, had been as successful and well informed and well backed with money as Mr. Hoover, when, a few years ago, Mr. Leiter started to corner the wheat market of Chicago and lost out because the other fellows were too strong for him, he might have repeated his corner over and over again.

"I do not charge that Mr. Hoover used this money for himself or for his personal profit. Not at all. He used it for the unhappy people in Belgium. But I deny that he had the right to rig the markets of this country and put the provender of 104,000,000 people at the starvation point to make gambling profits to feed the people in some other land. It is wrong and wicked to go gambling with the food products of people. It was done, too, with part of the money America sent to Mr. Hoover to buy that food for Belgium. Nobody ever expected him to gamble with it."

Shouts His Accusation.

When Senator Lewis asked Mr. Reed if he seriously meant to accuse Mr. Hoover of gambling, the Missourian shouted:

"Of course I do! And I challenge the doubting Thomases of this Senate to call an investigation and put Mr. Hoover on the stand and get at the bottom of this matter. Let them see if Mr. Hoover is not one of the chief instruments in having brought about that deplorable condition which is now offered as the reason for this food legislation.

"I charge that Mr. Hoover himself is the author of that very condition of which he complains, and now, having brought it about, he asks this great power to meet it. He admitted in his evidence before the House Committee that competitive bidding between the Allies in our markets was one of the prime causes of our high prices. He failed to say he had been one of the bidders, or the head of the syndicate that did the bidding.

"And this is the man they want to put in control of our country's food markets. Ye gods, what have we come to!"

Senator Reed declared that if the Government was to spend millions for a food control administration, the authority should be vested in somebody "who knows something about it." He exhibited a letter written by Mr. Hoover to the Pullman Company regarding the preparation and serving of food on dining cars. The letter, he declared, instructed the company to reduce portions, while prices were to remain unchanged.

The instructions prepared by Mr. Hoover for housewives of the country were ridiculed by the Missouri Senator in a sarcastic attack which caused laughter in the chamber and galleries and necessitated frequent calls for order. He criticised the suggestion to order bread twenty-four hours in advance, declaring that if Mr. Hoover had lived in this country longer he would know the American housewife depended on the corner grocer, not on the baker.

Commenting on the advice against eating a fourth meal, Senator Reed said the average American was happy to get three. A food administrator, he asserted, instead of spending his time saving pie crust by not putting tops on tarts, should be planning for the erection of great warehouses to hold the vast crops which were to be harvested this year.

Phelan's Defense for Hoover.

Senator Phelan, in taking up Senator Reed's attack, said the Missourian seemed to forget that the country was at war and that unusual things must be done.

"We must give the broadest power to our Government if it is to run the war," insisted Senator Phelan. "Either that, or we must back out of the fight. If Mr. Hoover saved thousands of dollars to buy food for starving Belgium, he did it out of honorable purpose and not with the greed and crooked scheming of a gambler. If he is the kind of man who can save this country from threatened food shortage and gamblers' prices in food he is the man we want. I resent the charge that Mr. Hoover gambled with the Belgium relief funds, and I think all of America will resent it."

Senator Phelan said that the nearest approach to speculation by the Belgian Commission was when a carload or shipload was bought and means of transportation could not be secured; then it was sold at a profit if possible for the relief fund. He paid a tribute to the vision and patriotism of Mr. Hoover and read a statement showing that the food administrator was a native of Iowa and citizen of California.

Says Hoover Foresaw "Swine" Attack.

John Beaver White, a member of President Wilson's American Committee of the Belgian Relief Commission, issued a statement tonight declaring Senator Reed's charge that Herbert Hoover conducted "gambling operations" in buying for the commission was absolutely untrue.

"The purchases of foodstuffs in the United States for the Belgian relief have been made from the beginning absolutely by the American Committee. Neither Mr. Hoover nor the American Committee ever speculated in any commodity purchased for the Belgian relief. I recall that in setting up the American organization Mr. Hoover stated: 'I do not want myself to handle any of these hundreds of millions of dollars, for some day some swine will turn up in this country and say I have stolen it.'"

HOW TO SAVE IN BIG HOMES.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The food-saving program adopted at the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has been selected by the conservation section of the Food Administration as a model for other large households. Mrs. Roosevelt on her pledge card said that there were seven in the family, and that ten servants were employed. Each servant has signed a pledge card, and there are daily conferences.

Mrs. Roosevelt does the buying, the cooks see that there is no food wasted, the laundress is sparing in her use of soap; each servant has a watchful eye for evidence of shortcomings in the others, and all are encouraged to make helpful suggestions in the use of "left overs."

No bacon is used in the Roosevelt home; cornbread is served once a day. The consumption of laundry soap has been cut in half. Meat is served but once daily, and all "left overs" are utilized. Menu rules allow two courses for luncheon and three for dinner. Everybody eats fish at least once a week.

"Making the ten servants help me do my saving has not only been possible, but highly profitable," said Mrs. Roosevelt today. "Since I have started following the home-card instructions prices have risen, but my bills are no larger."

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney came here today to talk about food conservation plans and announced that about Aug. 1 she would open her home in Newport for the first of a series of meetings to be held in the fashionable Summer resorts. Mrs. Willard D. Straight, formerly Miss Dorothy Whitney, has promised to interest the Summer colony at Southampton, L. I., and arrange for classes on food conservation there.

STATE FOOD BILLS DELAYED

Delegations Visit Albany for Hearing, but Are Disappointed.

ALBANY, July 16.—Representatives of twelve or more organizations from various parts of the State which are interested in the food control legislation to be enacted at the special legislative session the latter part of the month were disappointed today. They came to Albany expecting that the Legislative War Committees would have a bill prepared for their consideration. Instead they learned that the measure had not been framed and probably would not be put into final form until just before the extra session convened on July 31. They sat around the Senate Chamber and discussed matters while the war committees considered matters in executive session.

At the conclusion of the executive session Elon R. Brown, majority leader of the Senate and Chairman of the joint committee, announced that a public hearing would be held tomorrow, when suggestions for the legislation would be received. Other hearings will be held here later in the week if deemed necessary. Harings will be held in New York beginning next Monday.

WILL INVESTIGATE LONDON FOOD PRICES

Trade Commission to Ascertain if They Are Lower Than in This Country.

ACT ON MADDEN'S CHARGE

Illinois Congressman Declared London Prices Were One-fourth Ours —Redfield Asked to Assist Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The accusation made against American hotelkeepers by Representative Madden of Illinois on the floor of the House that it costs four times as much to eat in Washington hotels than in first-class London hotels is to be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission. Announcement was made today that the commission "proposes to ascertain the truth" of the allegation that food is much cheaper in England than here. The commission today sent a letter to Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce in part as follows:

"The Federal Trade Commission has noted a statement by Representative Madden of Illinois to the effect that, despite the fact that London hotels are paying war taxes and much of the food they serve comes from the United States, it costs four times as much to eat in Washington as in hotels of the same class in London, and that a table d'hote dinner at the Hotel Savoy in London costing $1.62 cannot be duplicated in the United States for $5, and that steaks costing $1.50 here are only 35 cents in London.

"As your department maintains a commercial attaché and staff in London, would it be asking too much for you to cable that division for some information for us? We are now engaged in a food price inquiry, and, if it is a fact that food is so much cheaper in England than in this country, it is highly important to learn that fact definitely and the reason thereof.

"Would you therefore be so kind as to request your commercial attaché to procure for us at his earliest convenience the menu cards or cartes d'jour of the leading hotels and restaurants, as well as those of some of the less pretentious places, and translate the prices into United States currency terms, and ascertain what the hotels and restaurants pay dealers for the meat, flour, lard, butter, sugar, tea, coffee, &c., used, and from what class of dealers these supplies are purchased, whether at wholesale or retail?

"Also have him ascertain what prices are demanded and paid at retail for meat, such as beef, mutton, and pork, and for flour, lard, butter, dried beans and peas, sugar, tea, coffee, salt and dry smoked fish, tinned fish, tinned vegetables, poultry, live and dressed; potatoes, onions, oatmeal, and such other food as may be on the market.

"We would like to know what are the retailers' prices and the prices the retailers pay the jobbers, and what the latter, in turn, pay at original sources, together with such other information as your staff can give as reasons for the very moderate prices alleged to prevail in Great Britain.

"We are now engaged in a searching investigation of these subjects in this country, and this information will be of great value to us in arriving at conclusions and possibly in suggesting remedies."

DENIES MADDEN'S ASSERTIONS.

London Food Prices Higher Than Here, Recent Sojourner There Says.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Entirely misleading comparisons are continually being made as to the cost of living here and in England by people who, however well disposed to bring out the facts, base their calculation upon false information. I lived in London for over two years during the war, returning to New York about the middle of last April. I had the experience of a householder in London and learned from that exactly what market prices were, and came also to know the hotel and restaurant charges.

I want to say that, based upon this experience, prices in London today are at least 30 per cent. higher than they are in New York, Washington, or any other of our great American cities, whether it be at the hotel, restaurant, or market. Representative Madden of Illinois quoted figures in the House the other day to show that a steak costing $1.50 in a Washington hotel is served at 36 cents in a London hotel of the same class. With all deference to the Representative, I wish to challenge that comparison as wrong. I do not know whether the Representative has had steak at the Savoy, which he mentions, during this war, but I do know this, that the Savoy toll for steak is nothing like 36 cents, but is approximately the same as the charge in other first-class hotels everywhere. If a man goes to expensive hotels looking for high prices, whether in London, Washington, Tokio, Paris, Rio Janeiro, Dublin, or Petrograd, he always will find them.

In April, when I left London, the prevailing market price for the cheapest steak was 1s. 11d. a pound, or 46 cents, this varying according to neighborhood, as it does everywhere in the world. In some neighborhoods the charge was as much as 54 cents a pound. In Washington steak can be bought for 35 cents a pound in neighborhood shops. It is served at so-called popular restaurants here and in New York at 65 cents. In some of the cheaper restaurants in New York and other cities it is served at 45 cents, potatoes included.

In London there are few restaurants to compare with the popular-priced ones we have in this country. The London restaurateur always puts in an extra charge for vegetables, bread and butter with a meal order. Many of our restaurants include them.

Critics of high prices in this country—and no one attempts to say prices are not high—quote London market prices on potatoes at 2d. a pound, or 4 cents in American money. That sounds very well as compared with our average market price recently of 7½ cents a quart. On this calculation we would be paying considerably more than three times as much for potatoes in this amazingly productive country of ours. But let me impress the point that while potatoes under the price fixed by the British Government last Spring were to be sold at not more than 4 cents a pound in the market, there was such a scarcity of potatoes that they could not be bought if the householder were willing to pay a guinea apiece for them. What is the advantage of a maximum price of 4 cents a pound if there are no potatoes in the market to buy?

In the neighborhood in which I lived in London the greengrocer with whom we traded for eighteen months had no potatoes for a period of two weeks during March. We could buy none. All over London there was a scarcity of potatoes. The stocks ran so low early in March that dealers declined to sell to any customer more than a pound at a time. Even then it was impossible to conserve the stocks, and before the end of the month London was practically potatoless.

At one of the world-famous hotels on the Strand in London potatoes were struck from the menu early in March. Small restaurants charged 6 and 8 cents for a small boiled potato; other restaurants asked anywhere from 16 to 25 cents a portion, comprising two boiled potatoes, while mashed potatoes, French fried, lyonnaise, and other varieties of culinary art cost the patron of restaurant or hotel anywhere from 25 up to 50 cents, and more if he insisted on dining at the ultra-fashionable hotels.

The national vegetable of England is cabbage, and that is cheap. It is grown in every truck garden or farm in England. It is idle to talk of cauliflower costing 50 cents here and two cents in London. A cauliflower big enough to serve three persons can be bought in London at 25 cents, and no less. But the average householder there does not bother about cauliflower. No tomatoes were obtainable in London for weeks before April 1. The household menu, through scarcity of all foodstuffs, was confined to meat, bacon, eggs, cabbage, and turnips, the latter being used for days as a substitute for potatoes. No tomatoes were being imported from Spain, which largely supplies the English market, because available cargo room was given over to the import of necessities. The army demand upon bacon ran the price up to 48 cents a pound for the cheapest kind and anywhere from 50 to 54 cents for the better variety. Here in Washington the cheapest bacon sells in the shop at 35 cents a pound, and runs up, as in London, according to grade.

Butter in London cost from 48 to 54 cents a pound. Eggs brought 86 cents a dozen on April 1. In the height of the Winter they brought $1.25 a dozen. A pound loaf of bread, standardized by the Government, made from whole wheat, brownish in color and compact—not flaky such as the white bread baked before the Government issued its ukase against using refined flour—cost six cents. Only one form of loaf was allowed to be baked. Rolls, French bread, and all other kinds were under the ban.

London was running out of canned vegetables. The grocers charged anywhere from 25 cents to 35 cents for an ordinary can of tomatoes and many were entirely out of all canned stocks. Cans of baked beans that used to sell here for 10 cents, and now cost 12 cents, sold in London at 20 cents. Canned corn, carried ordinarily by few dealers, brought 20 cents a tin.

These prices I have quoted to give an idea of the higher prices prevailing in London as against those in this country. The average cost of living in London since the war has jumped up approximately 100 per cent.

Some of the prices quoted in this country to show the difference in the cost of living as between here and Great Britain evidently have been based upon Britain's pre-war prices, the general average of which was much lower than the average in this country. Any one who has lived in England during the war knows that living is appreciably cheaper in America.

Washington, July 14, 1917.

HARTIGAN QUITS FOOD POST.

Commissioner of Weights and Measures to Resume Law Practice.

Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the Mayor's Bureau of Weights and Measures tendered his resignation yesterday to Mayor Mitchel, to take effect on Aug. 1. Mr. Hartigan, who has been active in the Mayor's campaign for a better food supply, explained that he intends to resume the practice of law which he gave up upon his appointment on May 1, 1914. He has also been Secretary of the Mayor's Committee on Food Supply. The Mayor expressed regret at losing Mr. Hartigan's services. In his letter to the Mayor, Commissioner Hartigan wrote:

"The work undertaken by me in the administration of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, and in the complex problems of the food supply—national, State, and city—has been to me in the nature of a service directly to the people. In returning to private life my interest in these great public matters will continue unabated, and I will endeavor to do my full share of work on behalf of the people."

In his letter accepting the Commissioner's resignation, the Mayor said:

"I can readily understand that your increased personal obligations make it imperative that you increase your earning capacity, as it is impossible for you to do while holding your present office. Accordingly, I accept your resignation to take effect on Aug. 1, 1917. HIGHLANDERS TAKE NEW YORK BY STORM

A 71ST COMPANY AS ESCORT

Men Break Through Police Lines to Shake Visitors' Hands—Greeted at City Hall by the Mayor.

Not since all New York turned out, in one great wave of enthusiasm and affection, to welcome Marshal Joffre as the guest of the nation, has the city seen a popular demonstration approaching that which greeted the Canadian Highlanders, 200 strong, who arrived yesterday morning to spend "British Recruiting Week" here, and to give all New Yorkers a chance to see some of the British Empire's most picturesque and famous fighting men.

From 7 in the morning, when Colonel Percy A. Guthrie and his band of pipers of the MacLean Highlanders debarked from the Fall River boat to march uptown to the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, where the entire force is to be quartered for the week, until late last night, when the evening parade in the Bronx ended, the mere sight of a sturdy lad in a Glengarry bonnet, with a kilt and a pair of bare, brown knees, was enough to summon a cheering throng.

The first really good chance the crowds had to show their enthusiasm, however, came at 9:25 o'clock in the morning, when the second detachment of the Highlanders, composed of a platoon of Gordons of the Forty-eighth Canadian Battalion, with their pipers and brass band—altogether 11 officers, 52 pipers, 52 bandsmen, and 60 rank and file—under command of Lieut. Col. C. W. Darling, appeared on the platform in the Grand Central Terminal.

The climax of the day's greeting came in the afternoon. At 1:30 o'clock the entire Highland contingent left the subway at Bowling Green, accompanied by their escort from the Seventy-first, and formed in column under Lieut. Col. J. H. Wells of that regiment. Lieut. Col. Guthrie and his pipers of the MacLean Highlanders were at the head of the column; then came the Seventy-first company, then the Gordon pipers, band, and the platoon of infantry, while a huge motor truck, covered with men of the Seventy-first, who had megaphones and sang some new war songs, brought up the rear.

Up Broadway went the kilted fighting men, swinging along with the distinctive Highland marching gait, which is something like a cross between the rolling gait of a man-o'-war's man and the swagger of an American "doughboy," but has a cockiness like nothing else in the world. And the wave of cheers went rolling before them and behind them and over them, and riding on the crest the unforgetable wail of the bagpipes. At the City Hall they swung up across the plaza and formed in line, the kilted infantry in the centre, the pipers on the right flank and the band on the left, with the dust-brown uniforms of the Seventy-first forming a background.

Escorted by Brig. Gen. W. A. White, commanding the British Recruiting Mission, and by Lord Aberdeen, former Governor General of Canada and head of the Clan Gordon who himself had donned for the occasion the full regalia of a Highland laird, with kilt, sporran, plaid, and bonnet, Mayor Mitchel came down the steps to the centre of the plaza, while the Highlanders and the New Yorkers simultaneously came to "present arms," their officers stood rigidly at the salute, and the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The Mayor then made a brief address of welcome to the visitors.

"It is a great gratification," he said, "to the people of this city to be able to welcome your organizations here on this work of recruiting for the forces of Canada, to be sent across seas to take part in the fight, in which we are all now engaged as allies. We know here, too, of the splendid work of the Canadian troops on the western front in France. I am told that some of you have seen service in the trenches, and that you are going back with the new men who have been recruited, to take your part in this great war for liberty and justice. As Mayor of this city may I express the hope that your work in recruiting in this city will meet with entire success?

"We extend to you this welcome for the City of New York, and in doing so express the hope and the conviction that your service in Europe will be quite equal in the brilliance of its achievement and in the courage of individual endeavor, to the standard of the Canadian troops from the beginning of this fight."

British Officer Replies.

General White then replied, expressing the thanks of the British and Canadian forces for their cordial welcome, and alluding to the "happy augury" that while Canadian troops were standing for the first time on the soil of New York City as guests, American troops under General Pershing were on their way to make their first appearance at the front "to stand shoulder to shoulder with these men, or the brothers of these men. We are united in the same cause now, and the men of your great Republic are backing the Canadians on the other side of the water." General White then called for three cheers for the Mayor, and they were given with a will.

Then the pipes shirled out once more, and the column swung up Park Row, through the Plaza to Lafayette Street, and up that thoroughfare. Then, just as on lower Broadway, and later on Fifth Avenue, the most pleasant feature of the occasion became manifest. This was the failure of the police to appreciate the size of the crowd, and to take adequate steps for confining their enthusiasm within bounds. Even in the loft and factory district along Lafayette Street, and still more in Fifth Avenue, the crowd simply swamped the few policemen on duty, and several times all but brought the parade to a standstill. It was not that they were particularly unruly, but in their anxiety to show their enthusiasm they pushed out into the ranks themselves, slapping the Highlanders on the back, insisting upon shaking hands, pressing cigars, cigarettes, soda water and oranges upon them.

Several times the parade had to be halted temporarily to clear a way, and on these occasions the Seventy-first men in the motor truck in the rear enlivened the wait with song. Their most popular effort was called "Where do we go from here?" and went:

We'll slip a pill to Kaiser Bill and make him shed a tear;
And when we see the enemee we'll shoot them in the rear.
Oh, joy! Oh, boy! [shouted] Where do we go from here?

During these halts, also, Major J. M. Robinson of the Seventh Canadian Battalion, from British Columbia, who went overseas with the first Canadian force and has seen three years in the trenches, having been, as he said, "one of the first men to yank a Hun out of a dugout," seized the opportunity to make several impromptu recruiting speeches, which were received with cheers by the crowd.

One detachment of pipers furnished music at the rally held at Washington Irving High School last night, at which speeches were made by Job Hedges, Mrs. William Duncan, and others.

Notwithstanding the intense heat, the Highlanders showed their physical fitness by coming through the long parade in the afternoon with only one casualty. This was a 17-year-old bandsman of the Gordon Highlanders, George Culley, who collapsed in City Hall Park while the Mayor was speaking. He was taken to the Hudson Street Hospital.

Today's Program.

Following is the program arranged for the Highlanders during the rest of the week:

Gil Nicholls, a well-known golf professional, and metropolitan open champion, tried to enlist in the British army yesterday, but was rejected because of injuries he suffered in an auto wreck some years ago.

Helps Recruiting.

The enthusiasm aroused by the arrival of the Canadian Highlanders appeared to have a beneficial effect upon recruiting for the United States Army, and 186 men were enlisted yesterday by Colonel R. E. Walsh, in charge of recruiting for the regulars in New York.

Patrolman John Cavell of the New York Police Department, a cousin of Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse who was shot by the Germans, yesterday enlisted in the United States Marine Corps.

DENMAN HOLDS UP GOETHALS' PROGRAM

gram for the expenditure of $750,000,000 of public money for which the President's order has made the Emergency Fleet Corporation and the Shipping Board responsible.

"If the project had reached the condition of preparedness which it has been asserted it had reached the information could have been furnished us within two hours, or we could have been told that the information was not at hand.

"When we do receive the information in writing we will take up with General Goethals a discussion of all of the matters involved in the project of building ships. What we want is a speedy construction of vessels, a reasonable price for steel and ship fabrication, and retention of all alien tonnage on our stocks which may be necessary to carry troops and supplies to Europe, if the rate of submarine sinkings continues even two-thirds as great as has averaged during the five months ended July 1.

"We are also interested in the retention in the Government of every fabricating plant constructed by the Government and in determining the policy as to their sale on the facts as they exist after the war and not now.

"We cannot now tell what conditions the world commercial warfare may require as to the operation of these plants by the Government after the war in Europe is over. We are awaiting information from General Goethals on these and other matters referred to in the letter he gave to the public recently."

Personal Feeling Denied.

The difficulties which arose today seemed to disprove beyond any reasonable doubt the reports that there was no feeling between Chairman Denman and General Goethals. Mr. Denman will not admit that such a condition has anything to do with the situation. The attitude taken by the Denman faction is that the one desire is not to put any obstacles in the path of General Goethals, but simply to get shipping on the water, and that, in the belief of some, the stand taken by General Goethals, especially in his rejection of the so-called simplified Hough design for wooden ships, is a false move, opposed to the best interests of the country.

There is a serious question also over the price to be paid for steel. The point has been raised that the price of $153 a ton for steel ship construction, used by General Goethals in his statement of plans, approaches too nearly the high price against which Mr. Denman has taken a stand.

The debate over the policy for the commandeering of ships is also an important point, as Mr. Denman, it is understood, is unwilling to let the ownership, after the commandeering power is put into effect, remain in private hands—and that means largely under the British flag—unless he is certain that conditions after the war will not make it essential for the welfare of the country that the ships should belong to America.

The sting in the Denman statement of tonight comes in the fact that he asserted that General Goethals, had his plans been perfected, could have answered the questions within two hours, and did not do so. No response had come from General Goethals when Mr. Denman closed his offices almost twelve hours after the message, which was couched almost in the terms of a challenge, was dispatched.

Goethals Attacked in Congress.

Significance was attached also today to the fact that attention was being called by some of those who are not too kindly disposed to the Goethals program to a speech made in the House on Saturday by Representative Hardy, in which he attacked General Goethals for alleged extravagance. Mr. Hardy spoke of the prices General Goethals quoted for ship construction by private yards and the fact that he had said he would pay to those who built the new Government shipyards and the vessels constructed in them 6 per cent. premium on the total cost, with rewards for savings in cost and for speed in delivery. One of the remarks Mr. Hardy made, taken from The Congressional Record was this:

"In the name of the Lord of Hosts and of the people of the United States, will not somebody offer General Goethals rewards for savings somewhere in costs? Speed in delivery is all important, and the President wisely sought to place in charge of our shipbuilding the greatest genius in constructive and administrative ability in America. Naturally his eyes turned to General Goethals, crowned with laurels of victory in the greatest engineering achievement of the ages in building the Panama Canal.

"But every step he has taken since he has been selected by the President to take charge of this shipbuilding has seemed to me to be utterly reckless as to expenditure of the millions of the people's money and prodigal in the bestowal of princely bounties on those with whom and through whom he deals in behalf of the Government.

"From the first he has acted as if he were supreme and sole director of the nation's program of shipbuilding, and scorned the advice or co-operation of the Shipping Board, notwithstanding that the law has placed the building or acquiring of ships for the Government in the hands of the Shipping Board which was appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, and of which Mr. Denman is Chairman."

After referring to a portion of General Goethals's letter of Friday as "curt," Mr. Hardy said:

"Before this he has been called down by a refusal of Chairman Denman to approve what seemed to me an outrageous price for steel. Somehow, I understood that the matter was adjusted, but that matter was a trivial one compared to the matter set forth in General Goethals's letter which I have quoted.

"If this shipbuilding program of General Goethals's does not lay the foundation for the greatest of all war grafts and war scandals in history, it is not what it seems to me."

It is possible that General Goethals will reply today to Mr. Denman. He would give no intimation of his plans tonight.

BAKER SAYS DENMAN MUST GO.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, July 16.—In the opinion of Bernard N. Baker, who was one of the moving spirits in the creation of the United States Shipping Board, there is only one way to make that body accomplish the purpose for which it was organized. It is necessary that William Denman, Chairman of the board, be dismissed, says Mr. Baker, and that his place be filled by some one who knows something about ships and who will cooperate with General Goethals. Mr. Baker was named a member of the board when it was created last January, but resigned when he found that Mr. Denman was slated for the Chairmanship.

"Mr. Denman knows absolutely nothing about ships," said Mr. Baker today. "His sole qualification for the post was that he had had some experience as a lawyer on the Pacific Coast in prosecuting claims against other nations for alleged infringement of our rights on the sea. He was and is wholly innocent of any knowledge which would assist in building a great fleet.

"He will not co-operate with General Goethals, and he insists on adhering to the program for building wooden ships instead of steel ships. As a matter of fact, he has said that he intends to make the chief work of the United States Shipping Board the collection of claims against Great Britain for infringement of our rights. This, when Great Britain is our ally, will be very embarrassing to President Wilson.

"As a result of these tactics five months have passed and the board has no definite policy. It has not determined whether it will build steel or wooden ships.

"There is no doubt of the absolute impracticability of the wooden ship program. Steel ships can be built very much more rapidly, but ships made partly of steel and partly of wood can be built still faster. Steel can be put where the strain is the greatest."

Mr. Baker thinks that what he describes as the incompetence of Mr. Denman and his unwillingness to co-operate with General Goethals are all the more dangerous because other members of the board are hardly better informed on ship building than Mr. Denman is.

NEW YORK NEARING ITS RECRUIT QUOTA

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—New York State now needs fewer than 2,000 men to round out its quota in the regular army to full war strength. On April 1 New York needed 18,226 men to accomplish this. Since that date the State has furnished 16,316 recruits for the army. This means that 1,910 recruits will round out New York's quota.

New York on Saturday and Sunday led the country in army recruiting by furnishing 162 men. The State is now not far behind the total of 16,489 men that has been furnished to the army since April 1 by Pennsylvania. The States that have furnished the most recruits to the army now rank: Pennsylvania, 16,489; New York, 16,316, and Illinois, 13,605.

CITY'S DRAFT LISTS ARE NEARLY READY

WARNING AGAINST DELAY

Members of Exemption Boards Cannot Resign Now, and Failure to Serve Is a Misdemeanor.

Deputy Attorney General Roscoe S. Conkling, who is the State representative of the Federal and State draft officials in this city, announced last night that New York's 180 local exemption board will have completed their preliminary work by midnight tonight. Mr. Conkling added that the boards in all parts of the city are now working at top speed, and he expected the registration card of every man of draft age will have been properly numbered before sundown today. All the cards will be made out in duplicate, one set going to Albany and the other to Washington.

All day yesterday and late into the night the big bundles containing the numbered cards were being delivered to Mr. Conkling in the offices of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense. The work for the entire city was centralized yesterday; a representative of Commissioner of Elections Edward F. Boyle was on duty at the Mayor's Committee office checking up the returns of the various Assembly district registration boards and seeing to it that the cards were delivered without delay to the exemption boards. In cases where exemption boards were short of clerical help, or where only one or two members of the board were at work, Mr. Conkling hurried the needed assistance to them. The greatest delays reported were in certain districts whre the population is almost entirely foreign, but even in these districts the handicap was overcome and the cards will be ready by tonight.

To prevent delay caused by slackers among members of the local exemption boards Mr. Conkling made public a ruling by the Adjutant General to stop these slackers from resigning. Hereafter, it was announced, no resignation will be accepted, and in each case failure to serve on the local board will be a misdemeanor, subject to imprisonment for not more than one year.

The regulations require that the names of all registered men in an exemption district shall be posted in the headquarters of the various boards as soon as the men are given their serial numbers. It is expected that by Thursday these lists will all be displayed. All the 189 boards have reported headquarters except four in Manhattan and one each in Brooklyn and Richmond. The list is as follows:

SEND 14 GERMANS TO A PRISON CAMP

CLEARING ELLIS ISLAND

Ex-Asylum Inmate Who Says He Placed Bombs in Cargo Ships Held Pending Investigation.

Fourteen Germans, classed as "dangerous aliens" were removed from the internment camp on Ellis Island yesterday and started South to the prison camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. The men were in charge of ten United States Deputy Marshals and as many more policemen. They were transferred from the Battery to the Pennsylvania Station in police patrol autos. At the station they were handed over to United States Army officers, who left with them for Oglethorpe at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Among the men transferred to the Southern camp, were Karl Heynen, the former Treasurer of the Bridgeport Projectile Company, at one time the German Consul General at Mexico City, and the representative in Mexico of the Hamburg-American Line. Heynen came to this country shortly after the beginning of the war, and according to the Federal agents became one of the most powerful of the German agents operating in the United States. Borgermeister, at one time confidential Secretary to Dr. Heinrich Albert, who was the financial direction of the German propaganda in the United States, was another of the Germans taken South. Others in the party were Eric Grunert and Max Wilhelm, said to be expert wireless operators. Gustav Hartwig, who escaped from a German ship which was interned in South America and managed to make his way to New York, Carl M. Harmann, a former employe of Heynen and Karl Henchel and Adolph Joachimson, who were recently brought to New York from Porto Rico.

Four men who were recently seized secretly in New York were also started south for Oglethorpe. These men are Robert Auer, Alphonse Schader, Hemrich Lumbrumpf, and Paul Seidels.

A note reading "For my sake don't tell the police anything" was delivered to a young woman patient in Hudson Street Hospital yesterday morning. The woman is Miss Bertha Wright of Norwich, Conn., and the man who sent the note is a man who gave his name as Edward Harrington, who was later taken into custody, and under cross-examination by the police is said to have made the statement in writing that in 1916 he was employed by agents of the German Government to place bombs in the cargoes of ships plying between American and allied ports in Europe. The man was turned over to the Federal authorities, who are now investigating his story. The fact that the prisoner was at one time an inmate in a Connecticut asylum for the insane leads the authorities to doubt the truth of the information.

The woman in the case, according to the police records, attempted to commit suicide in a Greenwich Street hotel on Sunday. When the note was delivered at the hospital yesterday morning the police were called in and Detectives Skelley and Sullivan of Headquarters were informed that it had been written by Harrington, who was arrested at the hotel in which the woman had attempted her life.

The story Harrington told to agents of the Department of Justice was that he was in New York the latter part of 1915 seeking a job when he fell in with a German who told him he could make money easily and in large sums if he would agree to place bombs on certain ships. He said that in January, 1916, he had placed a bomb in a case of dried apricots which was later placed in the cargo hold of the British steamship Hellenes. The bomb exploded, he said, but failed to do the damage expected. Later he said he was designated to place a bomb on the American liner New York, but refused to do so.

ANTI-DRAFT AGITATOR HELD.

Law Unconstitutional, Plea of Meyer Graubard, Professional Orator.

Meyer Graubard, nephew of ex-Alderman Morris Graubard, was arraigned in the Federal Court yesterday on indictment charging him with failing to register under the provisions of the Selective Draft law. Graubard pleaded not guilty and said that the reason he had failed to register was because he considered the law unconstitutional and un-American. He gave his profession as an orator for the "East Side Agitators' Association," and said he was paid so much per day for agitating. Judge Learned Hand set Graubard's trial for next Monday and fixed bail at $1,000.

Five indictments charging Arthur E. Luzzi, the "official identification ring" peddler with having falsely impersonated a Government officer so as to defraud soldiers at Van Cortlandt Park and elsewhere, and also with unlawfully wearing the uniform of a Captain, was arraigned in the Federal District Court for pleading yesterday.

After Luzzi had pleaded not guilty to the batch of indictments, at the request of Assistant United States District Attorney Harold A. Content, Judge Hand fixed bail at $2,500, and set the date of trial for next Tuesday.

Four of the indictments charge that Luzzi, by falsely representing that the rings he was selling were official, collected $23 from soldiers.

MOSQUITOS ROUT WORKMEN

RIVERHEAD, L. I., July 16.—The mosquitos have been very troublesome at the east end of Long Island this Summer and at no point are they worse than about the flatlands on which the United States is erecting the camp for conscripts which will be known as Camp Upton.

The contractors who are working at the camp are having trouble in keeping men, although they are paying wages that in the past have been unheard of in this region. The pay for common labor is $3.75 a day, and skilled men are getting not less than $5 a day.

Men coming from New York find the conditions so bad that they do not stay long, and the contractors are said to be seeking native workmen in the hope they will be able to stand the swarms of insects better. The soldiers now here are suffering considerably. They work with netting over their faces and hands, but the insects bite through their shirts and trousers.

GUARDS' FREE RIDES AT END.

Federal Statute Forbids Courtesy from the Car Companies.

Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, announced yesterday that the privilege of riding free on the lines of the company which was given to officers and members of the National Guard of the State would cease because the guard had left the service of the State and been mustered into the Federal service. The privilege of free transportation can be no longer extended, Mr. Shonts explained, because of a Federal statute forbidding the acceptance of volunteer service for the Government, except in cases of sudden emergency involving loss of life or the destruction of property.

Hereafter no uniformed men, except the city's policemen and firemen, will be permitted to ride free.

LINER TO FLY PAPAL FLAG.

Germans Promise Protection to Archbishop on Way to Rome.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—When Archbishop Benaventura Cerretti sails shortly from an American port on an Italian liner for Rome to become Assistant Papal Secretary of State, the ship will fly the papal flag under an arrangement by which Germany has promised immunity from submarine attack. Ambassador Riano of Spain obtained the promise.

Archbishop Cerretti until recently was apostolic delegate to New South Wales, and for ten years was Auditor of the delegation here.

Hopes Draft Will Find Her Son.

Mrs. Angela Maria Monaco D'Amato of 246 East 148th Street has asked for assistance in the search for her son, Nicola D'Amato, 28 years old, who disappeared from his home in West Virginia four years ago. She hopes that he may be found by means of the system set up by the selective draft law, and she has written to the War Department asking whether her son has been enrolled under the law.

DRAFT PROBLEMS CALL FOR STUDY

tion of these causes will keep the local boards fully occupied, leaving to the more deliberative superior boards the entire handling of the much more vexing questions of industrial exemption.

CALL CENSUS BASIS FOR DRAFT PADDED

Senators Lodge, Brandegee, and Pomerene Attack Figures—Bureau Is Asked to Explain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Padding of census figures in various Northern States so as to work inequality in the operation of the selective draft system was charged by Senators Lodge of Massachusetts, Brandegee of Connecticut, and Pomerene of Ohio, in a Senate debate today over a resolution calling on the Census Bureau to explain how it had arrived at its method of calculation. The three Senators alleged that severe injustice would be done many communities if the system was not revised so as to make a more equitable draft throughout the country. Two of the Senators are Republicans, the other a Democrat and a firm supporter of the Administration.

Both Senators Lodge and Brandegee criticised the system as giving exemption to huge numbers of aliens in various communities, while forcing native-born naturalized Americans to enlist in greater proportion, virtually to fight for the aliens who will stay at home. Senator Lodge insisted that either aliens ought to be obliged to fight in their own countries or the draft system should be changed so that the quota of enlisted men in these largely alien communities would not be so great.

Senator Brandegee said that the Administration appeared to have created a draft system that relieved the South of "anywhere near the proportion of conscripts that the North must provide." Senator Lodge contended that the Census Bureau ought to explain at once the padding of figures.

Resolution Asks Information.

The resolution calling for information on the selective draft, as put in by Senator Brandegee, was adopted. It reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of Commerce is hereby directed to furnish to the Senate information which will disclose the methods and plans or system used in estimating the population of cities and States for the purpose of military draft or conscription by the Bureau of the Census, and also to transmit to the Senate said estimates of population.

"I am sure," said Senator Brandegee, "that every State in the Union desires to furnish its full quota of troops for this great war in proper proportion to its population. I desire, however, to call attention not only to the injury done to the States and to the cities by overestimating their population, but it so happens, as shown by a table put into the record by the junior Senator from New York, Mr. Calder, that, inasmuch as all the aliens in this country are exempt from the draft, and inasmuch as the proportion of aliens in many of the Southern States varies from one-half of 1 per cent. to 1 or perhaps 2 per cent., while the proportion of aliens in some of the Northern States varies from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the population, the result of exempting all of the aliens from the draft is not only to excuse them from service, but to place, pro rata, according to the total population of a State, upon American citizens the burden of defending the lives and properties of the aliens who are enjoying the benefits of the institutions of this country."

Senator Brandegee cited New Britain, Conn., as a striking example of the way in which the exemption of aliens was working a distinct hardship upon the native-born and naturalized American population. He said:

"Somebody wrote me the other day that they had taken a poll of several of the large factories in the town of New Britain which developed that there were 3,500 aliens and 3,500 American citizens engaged in those two or three factories. The result is that the 3,500 aliens are going to remain there, while a large proportion of the 3,500 Americans are going to be drafted and sent abroad to defend the 3,500 aliens who are exempt.

"No matter how patriotic men may be or how willing to submit their destiny to the turn of the wheel and to the gamble of the draft they do not want to play with loaded dice, and they do not want to take twice the chance of being drawn to go to death and disease that a man has to take if he lives in some other State. To that extent it seems to me a tremendous wrong was committed, or, to put it mildly, most mildly, a great mistake was made in our draft law."

Explained as Unavoidable.

"When the bill was before the Military Committee," interjected Senator Reed, "I called attention to what was substantially the very thing the Senator is now speaking of. The point perhaps was slightly different, but it was the same in principle. The War Department officials explained that they had no practical way of avoiding this difficulty. I thought then and I think now it would have been easy enough. But I learned then and I have been learning ever since that it is a kind of heresy for anybody to differ with department heads who come here with one of their 'ready to wear' bills."

"I too, have consulted with the military authorities," Senator Brandegee went on. "I submitted a letter from the Governor of my State to one of the high military authorities. He thinks that as only 687,000 are to be drafted in the first call, the inequality complained of will not be very serious when spread over the entire country. But be that as it may, there is no reason why men who have lived in this country and are living here, sending their children to our schools, paying taxes here, and accumulating property here, should not fight for the preservation of this country in this great emergency.

"If there are any provisions in our treaties with foreign countries that their subjects residing here shall be exempt from draft, I have no doubt that as to the aliens residing in this country, who are subjects of the countries with which we are in alliance in this war, every single country should waive any exemption contained in such a treaty; and, of course, the individual alien in this country could take no advantage of it."

"There have been the same inequalities in Ohio as those referred to by the Senator from Connecticut as existing in his own State," said Senator Pomerene. "The population of Ohio, according to the Federal Census of 1910, was 4,770,000. The population used as a basis for calculation and credited to Ohio today is more than 6,000,000. My own city, Canton, has 75,000 population, according to the best judgment of our citizens, based on calculations by the publishers of the City Directory. I am quite sure that Canton's population does not exceed 80,000, but according to the Census Bureau's figures it is 177,000.

Overestimates in Ohio.

"Akron, according to the best judgment of its citizens, has a population of 125,000, certainly not over 150,000. Its population has been growing by leaps and bounds, but not to meet the Census Bureau's credit of 380,000 population. Cleveland has about 800,000, but the Census Bureau estimates it 1,125,000. Of course is going to work a grave injustice."

"This matter of the resident alien, which creates such an injustice in the distribution of the draft, is a matter of the greatest importance," said Senator Lodge. "Aliens ought not to be counted for the draft unless they are going to be drafted. If they won't serve in the armies of their own countries they ought to be exposed to the draft here. It is a matter for the speedy attention of the executive branch of our Government and for immediate legislation. This should come without any delay at all.

"It is perfectly apparent from the astonishing figures that have been given by the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Ohio that Northern cities and Northern States are having their census estimates padded in order to make their proportion of the draft heavier, whereas, as recent public statements show, those of the Southern States are being reduced by the same beneficent authority.

"We are accustomed to bearing the taxation burden and seeing the receipts from taxation spent somewhere else, but I think it is a little hard to have our census figures padded so that we shall give more than our proportion of soldiers when the other section gives less."

The Census Bureau estimates for the draft were based upon registration figures instead of upon actual probable populations. Officials of the Provost Marshal General's office have explained that this was done to distribute the draft fairly among the men registered and avoid placing disproportionate burdens upon communities whose men of draft age had flocked to industrial centres.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 16.—Governor Marcus H. Holcomb tonight said:

"I am disgusted with the work of the National Board in allotting to Connecticut a draft quota of 10,977, which is absolutely unjust to this State with its thousands of munition workers and foreigners who have arrived within a few years. The State's population has been overestimated 300,000, and we are asked to furnish 4,000 more men than is fair, without any credit for enlistments since June 30."

SOME GUARDSMEN MAY GO SOON TO FRANCE

War Department Regards Many as Ready Now for Intensive Training Behind Firing Line.

WASHINGTON, July 16. — Mobilization of the National Guard for war service began today, and while no orders for embarkation of State troops for France will be given until after Aug. 5, when the entire force will be formally drafted into the United States Army, there are indications that some divisions will be regarded as ready to board transports after that date. The first clause of President Wilson's proclamation providing for the federalization of the National Guard for the war became effective yesterday. Under all guard units from New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota, and Nebraska went on the Federal payroll from that date. Approximately one-half of the total strength of the National Guard, or more than 125,000 men, is included in the force assembling.

The first step in their preparation has been to send to the armories additional clothing for their trip to the divisional training camps. Full campaign equipment will be issued at the big camps, reducing the amount of material to be transported with the troops. Supplies for the divisions are being concentrated in the depots established in the South to feed the guard units. Rapid progress is being made in relieving guard regiments which have been in the Federal service since the declaration of war guarding property. This work will be taken over largely by civilian watchmen.

It will be necessary to retain guardsmen for the protection of certain big munition works and other property vital to the conduct of the war. The department commanders will hold such troops as they deem advisable for this purpose.

The next step will be the ordering of divisions to the camp sites already selected for them. A full supply of tentage is available, department reports show; and the divisions will entrain rapidly. The most serious shortage of war equipment for the guard is in the artillery. It is regarded as practically certain that if the guard divisions are sent to France at an early date they will be equipped with French artillery on their arrival there. Presumably their first war work will be with the famous French "75s."

Departure of the guardsmen for France, it was indicated today, will be governed by the shipping problem. War Department officials regard many divisions of the State troops as virtually ready now for the intensive training behind the fighting line in France which will prepare them for their place in the trenches.

MUST SERVE ON BOARDS.

State Plans to Prosecute Any Who Resign Now and Hold Up Work.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 16.—Resignations from the draft boards must cease, and after tonight any one refusing to perform the duty assigned to him will be prosecuted, it was announced at the Adjutant General's office today.

All of the draft boards of the State have been organized, it was stated, but many members, when they realized the amount of work they were required to perform, frequently declined to serve. In some cases two members of a local board have resigned, leaving only one man in charge, and holding up the progress of the draft work.

AMERICAN SHIP SUNK; 3 KILLED, 5 INJURED

TWO NAVAL GUNNERS HURT

Reports from London Tell of Loss of Kioto and Sylvanian on Way to This Port.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Sinking of the American steamer Grace and the killing of three men, one of them an American, and the injury of two members of the naval armed guard was announced today by the State Department.

The steamer was owned by the Standard Commercial Steamship Corporation, 15 Whitehall Street, New York. She was sunk by a torpedo from a submarine.

Those killed were E. J. Farrell of New Jersey and two aliens named Van Wyke and Anderson. Five men were injured by fire from an explosion of petroleum cargo. Three were aliens. The two naval sailors hurt were Hugh Donnelly and George Wilson.

All survivors have been landed and the inured taken to a hospital.

At the office of the Standard Commercial Steamship Corporation, 15 Whitehall Street, it was said yesterday that no official confirmation had been received of the sinking of the steamship Grace, which sailed from New York on June 1 with a general cargo for Saloniki under charter to C. B. Richard & Co. of 29 Broadway.

The Grace flew the United States flag, was armed with two guns, one forward and one at the stern, and carried a crew of forty-five, including the gunners. She was a single-screw steamship of 2,900 gross tonnage, commanded by Captain Carl Erickson, and was valued by the owners at $900,000, exclusive of the cargo. The Grace was formerly the Cuban steamship Margarcia. Her name later was the Constable Hook, and when the Commercial Steamship Corporation acquired her she became the Grace.

News was received yesterday from Lloyd's, London, by members of the New York Maritime Exchange of the sinking last week of two British freight steamships, the Sylvanian of the Leyland Line and the Kioto of the Ellerman Line, which was under charter to the White Star Line in the Manchester-New York service.

The Kioto was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1910, and was a single-screw steamship of 6,182 gross tonnage, 432 feet long, with 54 feet 1 inch beam and 31 feet 1 inch depth of hold. The Sylvanian was a single screw steamship of 4,858 gross tonnage, built at Stockton-on-Tees in 1914, and was 390 feet long with 50 feet 6 inches beam and 28 feet depth of hold.

Both steamships were bound for this port in ballast at the time they were sunk by the German submarine.

SPRAGUE OFFERS PLAN TO BEAT SUBMARINES

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Frank J. Sprague, former President of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and a member of the Naval Consulting Board, presented to Secretary Daniels today a general plan, on which he has been engaged for some weeks, for coping with the submarine problem.

While no details were revealed, it is understood in a general way that the proposal is based on recognition of the principle that offensive rather than defensive measures are to be preferred in combating submarines. It is said to provide for new types of sea-going patrols, equipped in part with a new weapon of offense, whose function would be to make certain regions of the sea more perilous for submarines than for cargo boats.

If adopted the project would involve, it is said, important changes in the shipbuilding program, both merchant and naval, in order to meet the critical period of troop, supply, and munition transportation next Spring.

Neither the Secretary nor Mr. Sprague would make any detailed statement regarding the plan, which will be given consideration by department officials, and probably the General Board of the navy, before a decision is made.

300-FOOT SUBMARINE STOPS A DUTCH SHIP

The officers of a Dutch freighter which arrived yesterday at an American port from Holland reported that the vessel was stopped on June 22 off the Norwegian coast by one of the latest type of U-boats which they declared to be at least 300 feet long.

According to the Dutch officers, the submarine had one four-inch gun mounted forward and another at the stern, two smaller quickfiring guns abreast of the conning tower and two more on the quarter aft. The officers heard that she carried a crew of ninety and could steam twenty knots on the surface and fourteen knots under water.

After the papers had been sent over from the Dutch steamship with the chief officer for examination the German commander gave permission for her to proceed. Three days later, the officers said, the freighter was stopped off the Faroe Islands by one of the older submarines about ninety feet long and another inspection of the ship's papers was made by the German commander before the Dutch steamship was allowed to continue her voyage to America.

It was stated that the German submarines were keeping closer in toward the Norwegian coast and not venturing so far out in the North Sea on account of the nets, mines, trailing drags and other devices for their capture or destruction.

OUR MEN IN FRANCE GET DOWN TO WORK

By The Associated Press.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, July 16.—The American General arrived last evening, and today began supervising the initial work of his troops, who are now nearly all here. At noon today the General commanding the French troops, who will train with the American troops and give them the benefit of their long and varied experience also reached the camp.

The scene was impressive, the more so because of its staging in a quaint little village, which turned out to the last child to stare in wonder at the newcomers, whom they hail as saviors.

The army is fast getting down to real work, and the countryside is swarming either with squads bound to or from the training places or with supply columns. To the best of their ability the people of the entire neighborhood welcomed the newcomers with great enthusiasm, and the Americans only have language difficulties in fraternizing with their hosts. The troops almost without exception have been billeted about the countryside and are fast getting accustomed to the French ways of living. Beautiful weather has assisted materially in the speedy encampment of the troops.

The American General this afternoon paid a visit to all the positions occupied by his men.

RIDICULES OUR TROOPS.

Berlin Paper Says British and French Scoff at Americans in France

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sunday, July 15.—The Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger has still another "cheer-up" story purporting to come from Dieppe, in which it endeavors to prove that the American "Sammies" who landed at a French port are objects of ridicule among British and French officers because they are treated like heroes back from victory, "whereas the real heroes from the front were obliged to line up while the 'Sammies' marched by in triumph."

The paper says that the Belgians and French criticised this review still more. "One must admit that it is only propaganda to stir up the war-tired people, and especially to show the pollus that they will soon be relieved of hard service. Anyway, it is certain that the officers of the Allies did not take the pomp of the arrival of the American troops seriously, and that the singing of the American 'Tipperary' evoked shouts of laughter." The words of the song, the Lokal-Anzeiger says, sounded ridiculous to the battleworn soldiers. The paper adds: "Also among the American soldiers there appears to reign a spirit that shows the way in which the troops had been deceived, just as the New Zealanders and Australians were when they came to Europe."

The paper then proceeds to ridicule the geographical knowledge of the Americans, who think they will soon have finished with the Germans. It says:

"They speak of the thousands and thousands of flying machines being built in America to destroy Germany from above. They do not contemplate their own task as difficult."

DELAY REPLY TO ARGENTINA

Germans Postpone Action Owing to Chancellorship Situation.

BUENOS AIRES, July 16.—Dr. Luis D. Molina, the Argentine Minister at Berlin, has telegraphed the Minister of Foreign Affairs that Germany's reply to the demand of the Argentine Government regarding the torpedoing of Argentine ships will be delayed for several days owing to the change in the Chancellorship.

Argentina instructed her Minister in Berlin to demand of the German Government an answer to the Argentine note calling for satisfaction for the torpedoing of the Argentine steamer Toro and the promise to cease attacks on Argentine ships.

Pending the receipt of this reply diplomatic relations between the two Governments have remained on their former basis, but a rupture is considered imminent, the general opinion being that Germany will not give the satisfaction demanded.

The instructions to Argentina's representative in Berlin to demand a reply to the Argentine note were dispatched when it appeared that the Ministerial crisis there had passed.

SUE MRS. VANDERBILT TO OUST DANCE CLUB

BASED ON EXCISE RAID

Music, Laughter, and Chauffeurs' Yells Bar Sleep Near Club de Vingt, Complaint Recites.

Mrs. Alice G. Vanderbilt, widow of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., who under her husband's will has the life use of the house at Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue and the premises at 42 East Fifty-eighth Street, formerly the Vanderbilt stable, was made defendant in the Supreme Court yesterday in a suit to declare that the Club de Vingt, now occupying the property at 42 East Fifty-eighth Street, is a nuisance which should be abated.

Mrs. Vanderbilt is joined as a defendant with Mrs. Anna K. M. Hawkesworth, President of the Club de Vingt, and the club itself, on the ground that the club has been conducted illegally and in such a way as to disturb the neighbors with Mrs. Vanderbilt's full knowledge and consent. The suit arises from the raid made on the premises last Winter by agents of the Excise Department, when they seized a large stock of liquors on the ground that the club had no license to sell intoxicants.

The complaint, in which an injunction is asked, is brought by the Swetland Realty Company, owner of an apartment hotel at 46 East Fifty-eighth Street; Mrs. David E. Simon of 38 East Fifty-eighth Street, and others owning property in the immediate vicinity of the club. The plaintiffs say that Mrs. Hawkesworth conducts a dance hall in the premises and that prior to the establishment of the club the neighborhood was quiet and free from objectionable business or trade. The complaint recites that the premises, although alleged to be conducted as a club, are open to the public at $1 admission from the afternoon to 7 P. M. and from 11 P. M. to 3 A. M., and that it is not a club, but is conducted so as to limit those who are admitted to the dance hall.

The plaintiffs tells of the excise raid on the premises, and say that subsequently Mrs. Hawkesworth caused a liquor license to be issued to one William P. Duchesne, but when the plaintiffs started proceedings to revoke the license on the ground that the consents of the required number of neighboring property owners had not been obtained, Duchesne gave up his license voluntarily, and since then "intoxicating liquors have been sold, and are still sold, under various tricks, pretenses, and devices by which the defendant and her associates are endeavoring to conceal and disguise such violation of the law."

The plaintiffs say that the nuisance arises from dance music, the loud talk and laughter of the patrons, and the shouting of the chauffeurs of a line of automobiles in front of the place. It is also alleged that vaudeville performances are given without a license.

USE MOTOR TRUCKS FOR JERSEY CROPS

Fruit and Vegetable Growers Find Top Prices Reward Quick Delivery.

MARKET WAGONS DISCARDED

Auto Freight Routes Make Farmers to a Degree Independent of Railroads in Short Hauls.

Bumper crops in New Jersey are being put on wheels and rolled right into the city markets, fresher and faster this year than ever before, and for the first time since the growing of perishable products became an extensive industry in the State the farmers feel themselves to some degree independent of railroad schdules and freight rates.

Motor trucks have solved the problem of fast delivery for Jersey farmers. Hundreds of big cars, some of them with a carrying capacity of several tons, have been put on the roads between the farms and markets this season. Many of these auto trucks are owned by the farmers themselves, having been purchased to replace horses and market wagons.

A number of motor freight routes have also been opened in the truck-growing districts by small companies or individuals, who have built up flourishing businesses by transporting vegetables and fruits.

Two hours from the centre of South Jersey's richest agricultural district to the Dock Street markets in Philadelphia is the record made by motor trucks. Peas, beans, beets, tomatoes, lettuce, spinach, watermelons, peaches, berries, and a variety of other products gathered on the farms in the afternoon reach the city markets the same evening by the motor truck route and are in the best of condition for the consumer the next morning.

Farmers who in the past had depended entirely upon the railroads had to have their produce packed and at the shipping stations by 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The fast freight trains are usually scheduled to reach the city markets shortly after midnight, but growers say that the shipments are frequently so delayed that the produce has to be held over for the next day's market. Great quantities of farm crops are wasted each year by these delays, the losses invariably falling upon the farmers.

Freight congestion and shortage of cars have further added to the shipping problems of the farmers this Summer and made motor trucks an absolute necessity for the large growers. The New Jersey State Board of Agriculture has assigned an expert to handle the shipping problems of the farmers this year in an effort to facilitate the movement of crops by the railroads.

What effect this will have will not be apparent until the season is further advanced. Farmers know, however, that the railroads are already loaded up almost to the limit with freight. By using motor trucks for delivering the crops to markets reasonably near the producing points, the growers believe that they will do much to relieve the railroads of their burden and make more cars available for the shipment of produce to distant points.

For the normal shipments of crops to distant points, such as New York, Boston, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Chicago, and even Canada, where early quantities of early Jersey white potatoes, tomatoes, and peaches are marketed, it is roughly estimated that the following cars will be required in South Jersey: Potatoes, 5,000 cars; Tomatoes, 2,800 cars; onions, 600 cars; peaches, 1,500 cars; other produce, 4,000 cars. Refrigerator cars and the attendant labor of icing them will be required for the movement of tomatoes and peaches.

One Burlington County fruit grower, Horace Roberts, who spoke at many farmers' institutes in the southern part of the State last Winter, told of the success he had in sending his peaches direct from his orchards to the New York markets in big motor trucks. His scheme worked out so satisfactorily, especially in assuring the delivery of peaches in the markets in prime condition, that other growers intend to try it out when the peach season gets underway. The New York markets are about a six-hour trip from South Jersey for a loaded motor truck.

Comparisons between freight or express charges and motor truck costs in transporting farm products are said to be a shade in favor of the latter. As it is now, the railroads exact a pretty stiff toll from the trucks for transportation across the Delaware River on the ferries to the Philadelphia markets.

Where the farmer profits most by the motor truck, however, is in time saving and in reaching the markets with his products at a time when they bring the best prices. A few hours' difference in time makes a difference of several dollars in the returns from a load of produce, and rail shipments that arrive late have to be sold at a big sacrifice or thrown away.

Twice as many trips can be made to market in the same time by farmers who have replaced their horses or mules with motors. In these days of labor shortage and high wages this is no small item, and explains the reason for the doubling of sales of motor trucks among the farmers this season.

For the owners of small farms or growers who do not have full loads of produce to ship at times the auto freight system is proving a boon. South Jersey has a number of these auto freight routes. One method is to have the trucks pick up the shipments of vegetables and fruits at the farms and take them direct into the markets, and another is to have the farmers haul their produce to central shipping points.

BLIND, FIGHTS FOR MOTHER.

Boy Says Stepfather Used Whip When He Interfered.

Frederick Glass, 18 years old, who is blind, will appear in the Magistrate's Court at Flushing, L. I., today as the complaining witness against his stepfather, Joseph Remm, of Maspeth, whom he charges with lashing him with a whip.

When Glass appeared in court he made this statement to the complaint clerk:

"My mother married this man two years ago. For several months they have not been getting along well, and he has been cruel to her. Last night he quarreled with my mother and afterward turned and struck her a hard blow. I turned to him, and leaning my hand on his shoulder, said:

"'Please don't do that.'

"He then turned on me and beat me with a whip. I cried to him to stop, and he did, but not until after he had whipped me unmercifully."

Mrs. Olga Remm, the boy's mother, will appear as a witness before Magistrate Miller today.

TELLS HOW SHE HID ON ARMY TRANSPORT

Mrs. Hazel Carter of Douglas, Ariz., Was Determined to Go to France.

SOLDIERS HELPED HER

Red Cross Refused Her, So She Donned Uniform and Boarded Troop Train.

The identity of the young woman who cut off her hair and disguised herself as an American soldier in order to go with her husband to France and who was brought back on Sunday under military guard was disclosed yesterday when she was taken to Police Headquarters in Hoboken. She gave her name as Mrs. Hazel Carter.

She said she was married to Corporal John Carter in Douglas, Ariz., on Dec. 12, 1916, and lived with him happily until June this year, when the regiment was ordered to prepare for active service in France.

"Directly I heard that my husband was to go abroad," Mrs. Carter said, "I tried to join the National Red Cross in Douglas, because I wanted to be near him. They would not accept my services. I was born on a ranch and I have been used to riding and looking after myself since I was a child. After thinking it over I decided to disguise myself as a soldier and go anyway. Please understand that Corporal Carter did not know anything about it because I realized that if I was discovered and he had anything to do with my stowing away it would get him into trouble with his superior officers.

"When the troop train pulled out of Douglas I was at the end of the train, and my husband was at the forward end with his company. With my hair cut short and wearing a khaki uniform and service hat, I felt confident that I could pass muster. I made myself as military as possible in my bearing. Two days after the train started I was discovered by one of the officers and put off at some out-of-the-way station in the West and told to go back to Douglas.

"I said good-by again to my husband," Mrs. Carter continued, "but I really didn't promise him to go back home, or I should not have got on the train again. You see, the train had to switch there for about half an hour and all the soldiers got out to run up and down after the long journey. When the cry came 'All aboard!' I jumped on the end car, where I had several friends, and they took care of me out of sympathy.

"When the regiment finally reached port there was such a scramble among the thousands of soldiers that no one noticed poor little me when I went on board the ship and stowed away down below where the baggage was stacked in tiers. Three days after the ship was at sea I was discovered by one of the officers, and the Colonel ordered me to be placed under guard, where I was nicely treated, but was not permitted to land."

Mrs. Carter said that if she had managed to get ashore in France it was her intention to go to Paris and offer her services as an assistant nurse at one of the hospitals prepared for the American wounded.

The pseudo-United States infantryman, who was taken to Police Headquarters in her uniform, did not attract much attention on account of her boyish figure and slightly masculine features. As she had no other clothes Mayor Patrick R. Griffin of Hoboken gave the matron some money from the "Poor Fund" to purchase the necessary articles of female attire so that Mrs. Carter could return to her Arizona home today under her own personality. The police said that she was the handsomest and smartest looking soldier they had seen in Hoboken since the war started, which cheered the Corporal's wife up considerably. She asked the Mayor if he would allow her to get a position of some kind and remain in Hoboken during the war. Mayor Griffin kindly but firmly refused Mrs. Carter's request, and said that she would remain in charge of Mrs. Garrick tonight and start for the West today.

PORTO RICAN VOTE CLOSE.

Early Returns on Prohibition Referendum Show Drys in the Lead.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, July 16.—In the general elections held today the referendum on prohibition overshadowed in interest the election of a Resident Commissioner to the United States and the choice of members of both houses of the Insular Legislature. The indications from the early returns on the referendum tonight were that the race between the prohibitionists and the anti-prohibitionists would be close. Five districts in San Juan at 9 o'clock tonight gave 570 votes for prohibition and 527 against. The first complete report from any municipality gave a majority of more than 1,000 for prohibition.

Neither the Unionist nor the Republican Party has taken any stand on prohibition, but the Socialist Party, the leaders of which have asserted they would cast 40,000 ballots, has worked for a dry island. In the last general election the Unionist vote was 107,000 and that of the Republicans 82,000.

Potters to Demand Big Increase.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 16.—After two weeks' debate members of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters today decided to insist upon an average advance of 25 per cent. in wages for all lines of the industry. A revised scale affecting 10,000 workers will be submitted to the pottery manufacturers in September. All present wage agreements expire Sept. 30. Union leaders say they expect a strike because the Sanitary Potters' Association, which includes the country's largest manufacturers, refused to consider the tentative proposition of the union at a joint conference here three weeks ago. This conference ended in a deadlock.

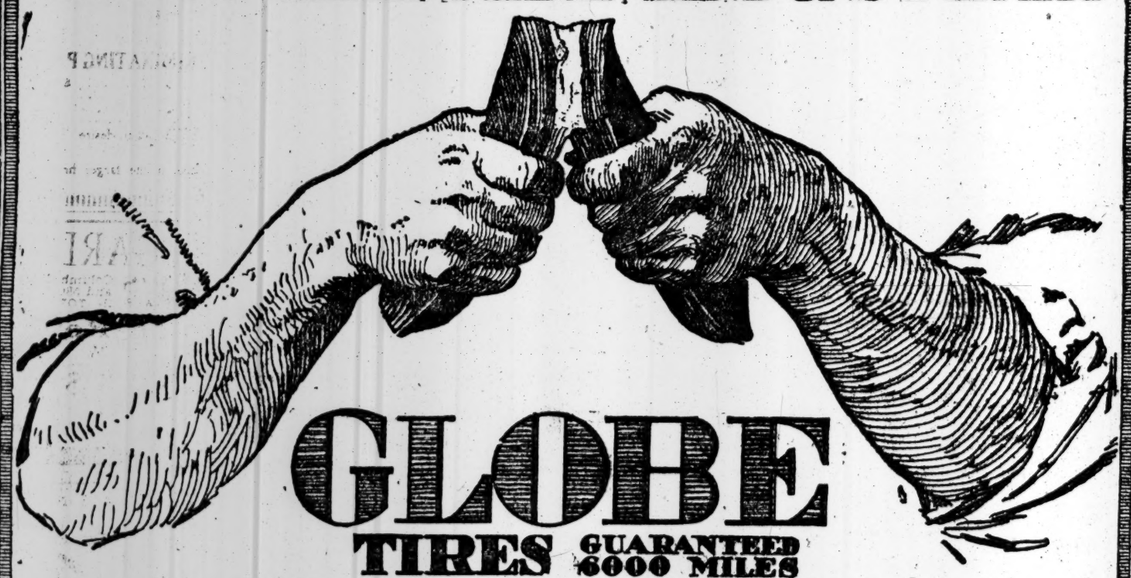
TRY TO TEAR THESE TENDONS APART



GLOBE TIRES GUARANTEED 6000 MILES

REDUCE THE OPERATING COST OF YOUR CAR

THESE hands are trying to tear apart a section of a Globe Tire—and they can't do it. Try it yourself. Cut through carcass and breaker-strip—down to the pure, white, plantation gum of the multiple-leaved spring-design tread. Now do your best to tear apart the tough tendons of the tread. Exert yourself. Use all your strength—but this wonderful tread will hold. This tire has everything—strength, speed, endurance and resilience. No tire was ever made that fought harder for great mileage—or gave longer service.

The "spring" built tread

The unique design of the GLOBE TREAD radiates and throws off shocks like a spring, instead of passing them on into the body of the tire. Moreover, the pores of the tread are filled by a unique process, as vanadium fills the pores of steel, creating a surface impervious to cuts and bruises, growing harder and more burnished the farther it runs.

The double breaker-strip

The "concrete" bead

A special bead, supported by 95 strands of interlaced copper-tin wire, reinforced with live rubber on the principle of reinforced concrete, and vulcanized into a resilient cable, further defends the wonderful friction of the straight-side tires.

Maximum mileage

Hand-made, brain-built tires—magnificently able to withstand the whirl of blows from the road beneath. Made in strictly limited quantities and pledged to unroll long maximums of mileage. It is the height of economy, for large cars and small to run on Globe Tires.

The Gloriously Discontented

They are the ones who accomplish things. They make history. They offer a receptive market. They read vital publications.

The AMERICAN MAGAZINE appeals to the gloriously discontented. The editor aptly describes it as "the selfish magazine." This means that it is the magazine that people buy and read because they get something out of it that they can use.

The gloriously discontented are not satisfied with things as they are. They are not satisfied with their jobs, their health, their efficiency, their incomes. They want to make each of these better. They welcome with enthusiasm the stuff that helps in this work.

The response came in the only form in which it could be weighed and measured—in the only form that counts. More people bought and read The American Magazine. More people advertised in it.

So quickly did people find out what sort of publication The AMERICAN MAGAZINE was that their demands outstripped the manufacturing department. In six months it ran 150,000 behind possible sales. In twenty months the gain in circulation was as great as in the preceding forty years.

So quickly did the advertiser get wind of the selling power of such an editorial policy that the volume of advertising went steadily up until the April number, and again the May number, and now the June number carried more advertising than any other monthly magazine. (See Printers' Ink, April 12, May 10 and June 14).

The present rate was based on 600,000. It went into effect with the May number. Of the May number 875,000 were printed; of the June number 880,000, and of the July number 887,000. The new rate is based on 700,000. It will go into effect with the January number. There are four fall months during which you can use The AMERICAN MAGAZINE at the present rate.

ARIZONA MINES TO REOPEN

Operators in Bisbee District Plan Working on Bigger Scale—Other Camps Quiet.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Reports that the activities of Industrial Workers of the World in the West recently had been financed by German gold have failed of substantiation after an exhaustive investigation by agents of the Department of Justice.

Officials said today they believed that nearly all the German money in this country had been located, and that virtually none of it had been used in that way.

Reports from various parts of the West today told of arrests of members of the I. W. W. under the President's alien enemy proclamation. It was said, however, that the percentage of German sympathizers found in the organization was believed to be no higher than that in many other organizations.

BISBEE, Ariz., July 16.—While armed civilian guards stood watch over the roads approaching this copper mining district to prevent the return of more than 1,100 men exiled from here last Thursday, the mine operators today prepared for operating their properties on a larger scale than any time since the strike call issued by the I. W. W. went into effect nearly three weeks ago.

Peace officers and leaders of the Citizens' Association, which conducted the deportation last week, reported they had no fear of further trouble; that any men who wished to work would be welcomed in Bisbee, but that they would not tolerate the return of "agitators" unless compelled to admit them by the Federal Government. The mine operators also said they were satisfied with the local situation, and predicted that, within a few days, virtually full shifts of men would be working in all the mines.

Reports from Globe, Miami, and Clifton-Morenci districts, where strikes are in progress, were that Sunday passed quietly.

JEROME, Ariz., July 16.—Two boxes of caps used to detonate dynamite and correspondence alleged to reveal details of Industrial Workers of the World plans to tie up the copper mining industry in Arizona were found here today by a suitcase said to belong to James (Red) Thompson, known as an I. W. W. leader. Thompson was deported with sixty-two other men last Tuesday, and now is held at Prescott.

COLUMBUS, N. M., July 16.—Several miners and shift bosses, deported from Bisbee, July 12, who are confined in the detention camp here, said today that they had received notices from their former employers telling them to come back to work.

A telephone message was received here last night asking that the miners and others whose families were destitute be sent back to Bisbee, but no action will be taken pending instructions from Washington. Shower baths were being installed, drains dug, a telephone line strung to the camp and a commissary established today.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 16.—Charged with complicity in starting the blaze which early this morning swept away the greater part of the business district of Mojave, Cal., J. O. Day, who is said to be an I. W. W., according to police officers, confessed to having caused the fire, but declared that it was an accident.

An I. W. W. plot to destroy the business part of Mojave is charged by officers. The fire was started when there was a high wind, and but for the sudden calm the city would have been destroyed, as the valves had been removed from all of the fire hydrants.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 16.—Troops were sent to Tye, a point on the Great Northern Railroad in the Cascades, because of word received that I. W. W. members would attempt to force a strike today in the lumber camps near that place.

CHICAGO, July 16.—A report that all lumber and timber workers affiliated with the I. W. W. west of the Mississippi would strike, beginning tomorrow, was disclaimed today at I. W. W. headquarters here. William Haywood, Secretary of the organization, said he had heard nothing of the report.

"THE MASSES" MUST WAIT.

Judge Hand Postpones Hearing Despite Magazine's Protest.

United States District Judge Learned Hand yesterday adjourned the hearing on the application of The Masses for an injunction to restrain the Post Office authorities from denying the use of the mails to the publication until 10:30 o'clock on Saturday morning. Gilbert E. Roe, who represented the publication, argued against the postponement, saying the delay injured the magazine at the rate of $100 a day, which was particularly damaging because the magazine had only a small capital behind it. Mr. Roe also urged that the Post Office authorities be compelled to specify the alleged objectionable features of the magazine, instead of characterizing the whole issue, which was denied the mails as obnoxious to Section 3 of the Espionage act.

Earl B. Barnes, who represented Postmaster Patten, said he needed the delay to study previous issues of The Masses to prove that its attitude in the past showed that the publication of matter tending to obstruct recruiting had been deliberate. Mr. Barnes asked that the specification of the objectionable matter be postponed until the later hearing.

SOCIALISTS SEEK RULING.

Want to Know the Class of Articles Government Will Allow.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—A delegation of Socialists from New York and Chicago, headed by Morris Hillquit, conferred today with Department of Justice officials with reference to the Government's policy toward the publication of Socialistic magazines and newspapers under the espionage law.

The conference was devoted largely to considering publications authorized by the Socialists and Socialist organizations, and others not so authorized. Officials will seek to determine what publications shall be permitted to continue and the class of articles which will not be deemed objectionable or in violation of the espionage law. Many Socialist publications already have been barred from the mails because of anti-draft propaganda. Hillquit and his associates have arranged to discuss this phase with the Post Office Department.

Seymour Stedman of Chicago told officials that the Socialists intended to abide by an official standard of printable matter if it could be obtained.

A method of confining the activities of Postmasters to filing of complaints with the Department of Justice instead of summarily barring publications from the mails also was sought.

TILLMAN WARNS OF RACE CLASHES

FEARS TROUBLE FOR NORTH

Migration, He Believes, Will Cause Cruel Outbreaks by White Men Who Lose Employment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Senator Benjamin R. Tillman of South Carolina, in a speech in the Senate today, said that the recent East St. Louis riots, whether incited by the I. W. W. or not, were the outcome of racial prejudice against the negro, and that the North was experiencing what the South had long endured with the negro problem.

The South Carolinian, characterizing himself as an "old slave holder," said he had long intended to write a book on the negro question, but that ill health had prevented, so that he may never be able to do it. He is extremely feeble and returned to the Senate only ten days ago to take part in debate on the Food Administration bill, after an absence of weeks.

Senator Tillman made his speech on the negro problem in the course of a debate on a resolution offered by Senator Sherman of Illinois calling either for a Congressional investigation or one by the Department of Justice into the causes of the East St. Louis riots. The resolution was laid aside when Senator J. Ham Lewis, Democratic whip, explained that he had been informed by the Department of Justice that it had already arranged for an inquiry into the riots by the Federal court in whose district East St. Louis is situated, and that an early report was anticipated.

In his speech Senator Tillman expressed the view that the South in some ways had treated the nego unjustly, and that slavery in the South had been a curse. He said:

"I am glad the Senator from Illinois introduced this resolution and has taken such an active part in ferreting out the truth about the East St. Louis riot, because it concerns his own State vitally, and the whole country indirectly. From what I know about the I. W. W. they are a bad lot, whether citizens or aliens, and should not be tolerated in this country if it is possible to get rid of them legally. Many good, hard-working Americans have joined this association because it preaches a doctrine which appeals to them; the wrongs of labor by capital, real or imaginary—there are both.

"I have undoubted evidence from my viewpoint that the riot arose because negroes from the South had been brought to East St. Louis for the purpose of taking the places of white laborers, whether I. W. W. or what kind of laborers I do not know, but they were white men.

"I have known for many years and not hesitated to say so all over the North in lectures and on the floor of this Senate that the average Yankee—we Southerners call all men Yankees north of the Mason and Dixon Line—has no love for the negro, except for political reasons. They want his vote and nothing else. I do not propose to go into the cause of the war or the whys and wherefores of this feeling; enough that it exists.

"The North is now beginning to understand the South, and to understand the race problem, too, and I am very glad to see so many Northern men being ordered to camps in the South for drilling and training. In this way they will see something of the race problem in its home, where there are the most negroes. The Spanish war served to open the eyes of a great many of the troops from the North about the race problem.

"The more the Northern people know of the negro the less they like him. I have epitomized it by saying 'they love him according to the square of the distance.' The further off he is the better they like him.

"Now, slavery was a curse and the civil war was necessary to destroy it. Nothing else could have done it because of the profit in it; just as the greed of man is now producing this tragedy in East St. Louis. The same struggle for freedom and the rights of the laboring classes is going on in Europe right now.

"More and more it becomes evident that the native Americans and the descendants of the early immigrants grow less and less friendly toward foreign-born competitors, no matter where they come from, and when they happen to be black, as the negroes from the South are, this feeling is added to race prejudice and caste feeling. The white blood, becoming once aroused, grows savage and very cruel."

NEGRO BAPTISTS PROTEST.

Call on Congress for Protection Against Race Riots.

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—Colored Baptist ministers, in a regular session of their conference, composed of representatives from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware, held here today, drafted a memorial to Congress protesting against the riots in East St. Louis and asking that the Federal Government enact laws to protect others of their race from suffering a like fate.

"While realizing," the memorial states, "that the Federal Government cannot interfere with a State's conduct of its own affairs, yet when a State can not or will not enforce its laws against murderers and incendiaries, national legislation is then a crying necessity for the peace and welfare of the nation."

DEPORTS ITALIAN RIOTERS.

U. S. Army Officer Quells Maryland Workmen Who Chased Negroes.

BALTIMORE, July 16.—More than thirty Italian laborers who tried to chase a group of negro workmen from Camp Meade, the National Army encampment at Admiralty, Md., today were themselves ousted by a detachment on guard there, put on board a Baltimore & Ohio train bound for this city, and told that if they ever came back they would be severely dealt with.

The deportation was supervised by Major Ralph F. Proctor, U. S. A., who is in charge of building the cantonment. So quickly was the coup carried out that the Italians did not have a chance to remonstrate. They looked at the soldiers and at the guns and boarded a train.

Major Proctor learned that the Italians who were helping to lay tracks for the Baltimore & Ohio had banded together and had told the negro workmen that they would have to get out of the camp. The Italians, it was said, feared that the negroes would work for less money than themselves.

When the Italians became menacing their foreman notified Major Proctor. A battalion of regulars escorted the men to the station, and United States Marshal Stockham and a number of deputies saw that they were sent into this city.

FLAT RIVER FIELD QUIET.

Guardsmen Prevent Further Deportation of Foreign-Born Miners.

FLAT RIVER, Mo., July 16.—The lead mine district was quiet today. National Guardsmen were guarding the homes of the foreigners deported by the mob. Hundreds of men with dinner pails were seen proceeding to the mines. Although this is prohibition territory, quantities of liquor have been found in the foreigners' homes and seized.

A near-panic was caused at Bonne Terre last night by the arrival of a committee of American-born miners from Flat River, who organized about fifty young men and marched into the foreign quarter, discharging firearms. Father Tem Sevcik, a Roman Catholic priest, who was returning from a visit among the foreigners, attempted to argue with the delegation and received rough treatment at their hands. A detachment of sixteen guardsmen was sent from Flat River to Bonne Terre and no further trouble occurred.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 15.—A telegram to President Wilson, appealing to him to prevent further mistreatment of foreign-born miners in the lead belt of Southeastern Missouri, was sent today by the Hungarian-American Federation, a national organization. The telegram read:

"Peaceful citizens of foreign birth were driven away like cattle from Flat River, Desloge, St. François, and Bonne Terre. They were robbed, mistreated, and separated from their wives and children. Please stop this racial fight, which is a disgrace to the fair and noble spirit of true Americans."

Martin Weiss, local representative of the Federation, said that no stone would be left unturned to have Congress assume charge of the situation.

Officials of mining companies whose holdings were affected by the outbreak against foreign labor in the lead field of the Flat River district of Missouri were not inclined yesterday to view the situation as serious, the militia being in full control. Among the big properties involved were the lead mines of the Federal Lead Company, which is a Guggenheim corporation, and the St. Joseph Lead Company. L. H. Besson, Secretary of the St. Joseph Company, said the agitation was started by outsiders seeking to create industrial disturbances. He believed these outsiders were agents of the I. W. W.

HASTINGS STRIKE ENDS.

Wages Are Increased, but Nine-Hour Day Remains.

HASTINGS, July 16.—The strike at the National Conduit and Cable Company's plant here ended this morning when an increase of 2 cents an hour in pay was granted to the strikers. They will, however, continue to work nine hours a day, having failed in their demand for shorter hours.

The machinists and higher paid workers compromised their strike last week by accepting an increase of 3 cents instead of the 5 cents demanded. It was feared that this morning when they went to work the foreign-born element, which was holding out for the eight-hour day, would make trouble, but the entire force went quietly back to work at the new wages.

SISTER ACTS AT THE PALACE

The Dollys and the Kounses Features of an Unusually Good Bill.

Two sister acts, as the profession calls them, headed the new bill at the Palace yesterday. The Dollys, Rozsika and Yancsi, returned to the varieties for a brief engagement after their first season in farce and before becoming the stars in a new musical play, while the Kouns sisters, Nellie and Sara, were brought back for another week following their enthusiastic reception on the occasion of their début week before last.

The Dollys have not changed, except for some unbecoming movie curls that they should have ironed out at once, which means that they are still exceedingly agile and graceful young women whose swift movements are full of the joy of living. They wore some attractive new costumes, and the program said their dances were new. A jazz band, in which the noise-makers were colored women instead of men, was a distinctly jarring note. The Misses Kouns confirmed the impression they made at their first appearance that they are young singers of rare gifts and promise. They sang some new selections and some of the most popular numbers of their former program.

The Morgan Dancers began their fourth and last week in the same program of classical dances. Jam Jimmy Duffy and Jack Ingliss, two amusing comedians much above the vaudeville standard, and one of Gus Edwards's musical sketches were other features of an unusually diverting variety bill.

Friars' Outing at Freeport July 25.

The Friars will hold their tenth annual outing at Freeport, L. I., on Thursday, July 26. The Lights, a club whose membership is composed largely of theatrical folk living at Freeport, has offered the Manhattan club the use of its house and grounds, and there will be various athletic contests between the members of the two clubs. The trip from the Friars to the Lights clubhouse will be made in autos.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," a new three-act farce comedy by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, was produced by A. H. Woods last night at the Apollo Theatre in Atlantic City. The cast included Florence Moore, Jane Grey, John Westley, May Thompson, Allen Dinehart, Carolyn Lilja, Tommy Meade, Conrad Nagel, and Helen Menken.

Klaw & Erlanger have obtained the production rights to "The Brain Promoter," a new comedy by Edward Laska. The locale of the play is New York and the action contemporaneous. It will be presented here next season.

Henrietta Crosman will not be seen in the role of Mrs. George in William Faversham's production of "Getting Married" again next season. She expects to choose a new play from several manuscripts she has under consideration.

Charles McNaughton, a brother of Tom McNaughton, an English comedian familiar to American audiences, has been engaged to play the latter's role in "Pom-Pom," in support of Mitzi Hajos during her forthcoming tour.

Josephine Victor has gone to Mount Kineo, Me., for a few weeks' vacation, and upon her return will begin rehearsals in a new play by Thompson Buchanan.

Jane Ross, who is said to be a descendant of Betsy Ross, who made the first American flag, is to play the leading role in a drama in which her ancestor is a prominent character.

William A. Brady produced a new comedy of American and Russian life, called "The Land of the Free," in the Savoy Theatre, Asbury Park, last night. Fanny Hurst and Harriet Ford are the authors. The cast included Florence Nash, Cerda Holmes, Charles Trowbridge, Harmon MacGregor, Alphonse Ethier, Vera Gordon, Gertrude Davis, and Adele Methick.

'THE WARRIOR' FILM VIVID AND THRILLING

Pagani, Massive Italian Actor, Makes the Whole Austrian Army Shake in Its Boots.

Ernesto Pagani, the massive Italian cinema actor, whom many will remember as Maciste, the Nubian slave in "Cabiria," a spectacular film first exhibited here several years ago, is the hero of a new picture shown here for the first time last night at the Criterion. The photoplay is entitled "The Warrior," though it might more fittingly be called in the argot of Broadway "Some Warrior," with the accent, of course, on the penultimate word.

Pagani, or Maciste, as he has been known since the "Cabiria" film, is the Douglas Fairbanks of Italy. As a matter of fact, he out-Fairbanks Fairbanks, since he is almost twice as big as our own favorite athletic actor. Fairbanks has often whipped a whole township in five reels, but in "The Warrior" Maciste makes the whole Austrian Army shake in its boots.

The Austro-Italian Alpine front furnished the background for most of the scenes, so that from a pictorial point of view the film is impressive. Through the intervention of Gabriele d'Annunzio, the poet, who wrote "Cabiria," permission from the Italian Government was obtained to invade the fighting zone with the movie camera, so the fictional episodes are interlarded with views of real troop movements.

There is an abundance of thrills in both. Bodies of Alpine soldiers are seen crossing over deep canyons hand over hand on cables and climbing to the crests of cliffs up knotted ropes. As for Maciste, he pushes horses off their feet by a mere shove, shakes a tree until it falls and spills its occupant into the stream, breaks a boulder from the mountain side and sends it catapulting into the midst of his foes below, and finally routs the enemy from the castle just in time to save the heroine. Some of Maciste's feats are real exhibitions of strength, while others are tricks of the camera so cleverly done that they have every appearance of reality.

In addition to its pictorial beauty and its power to thrill, "The Warrior" is most amusing. Maciste further resembles Fairbanks in that he has a winning smile, and, no matter how roughly he handles his opponents, there is always an element of good humor in it. So, in addition to applause for the feats of the Alpinos, there was much spontaneous laughter whenever Maciste administered a Chaplin kick and sent some villain hurtling down over a precipice, made a sleigh of one of his prisoners, and forced the others to pull him, or performed some other Brobdingnagian act.

SHIPYARD STRIKE WANES.

Owners Say Most of Those Who Walked Out Have Returned.

The shipyard owners said yesterday that the strike among their employes was practically over and that the majority of the men returned to work yesterday at the old wages. They denied that the demand of the strikers for a minimum wage of $4.50 had been granted.

Conciliation Commissioner Rowland Mahany left for Washington on Friday night to report to the Secretary of Labor on the situation and has not returned.

Harvard "Strong Man" in Marines.

BOSTON, July 16.—George A. Percy, Captain-elect of the Harvard hockey team and the university "strong man" for two years, passed the physical examination for the United States Marine Corps today and was enrolled, with the temporary rank of Second Lieutenant. He had taken a special examination prior to June 1 in order to qualify for a tentative commission.

Nine times out of ten—a cool, fren'ly tobacco in the pipe means cool, genial thoughts in the head. Velvet Joe.

ONLY Kentucky's "Blue Grass" soil could put that full-bodied flavor into VELVET.

Only kindly Nature could have brought out that flavor to the full with an age-mellowed smoothness. VELVET is Kentucky's and Nature's best pipe tobacco. You won't find its equal.

THE PRINCE IN COUNCIL.

Dark to us as is the drama going on in Berlin, one solid fact almost certainly emerges. The Kaiser has made his decision not to give in to his aroused people, but to stand firm for the theory and the policy which have brought him and them to this pass. He faces the rioters gun in hand. He did not call the Crown Prince to Berlin because he needed advice. He did not call him because the Crown Prince is his son, or because he is an army commander, or because he has confidence in his judgment. He called him there because when he dies the Crown Prince will become Emperor. The Empire is a continuing thing; it goes on though the person wielding the sceptre dies. When it comes to pass that the man temporarily holding that sceptre has to make a decision involving the structure of the empire itself, then he takes counsel of the future to learn whether his decision is to stand or fall. He does not need to consult an oracle. All he has to do is to consult his successor.

Therefore the Kaiser goes his way without consulting the Crown Prince even in momentous matters, provided they are matters which he can deal with and finish in his own lifetime; yet when a matter comes up for a decision which will affect the structure of the empire over which his successor will rule, then he consults that successor. For that reason the mere fact of his sending for the Crown Prince in this crisis shows clearly that the decision he had to make was one affecting the structure of the empire.

What was that decision? It had two phases. He had to decide whether to amend the autocratic edifice BISMARCK had built by putting a popular wing on it. And he had to decide whether to amend that form which, ever since the death of the Emperor FREDERICK, he himself has given to the empire; the form of an empire whose aim is not domestic perfection but external extension, till it accomplishes the domination of the world. He has modeled his conduct, as he himself has said, on that of THEODORIC, FREDERICK II., and CHARLES V., and they were the Emperors who most conspicuously sought to revive the system of the ancient Roman Empire, which governed the whole known world. To that end the energies of the reign of WILLIAM II. have been bent with a furious zeal, through thirty years of preparation, till they have culminated in the struggle to the death between the world and its would-be dominator that is going on today.

The question before him was not whether he should surrender the aims of BISMARCK and himself all at once, without firing a shot; that would have been simple. He had to decide whether to let the entering wedge be driven into those policies; whether he should admit the people to a share in the Government, even if not a great share, and to that extent impair the structure of BISMARCK; whether he should admit a modification of his war aims, and to that extent impair his own work. It was not whether he should overthrow the structure, but whether he should let a fissure be made in it, a fissure which would surely widen.

It is not hard to conjecture what the Kaiser's own views of his duty were, but there can be no two guesses about the nature of the Crown Prince's assurances to his father. The first fruit of that Crown Council was the dismissal of BETHMANN HOLLWEG, the Laodicean, the man whose misfortune it has always been that he could see two sides of a question. The answer has been given. The Kaiser has burned his bridges behind him and intends to face his people without any further attempt at conciliation. The Reichstag refused, we are told, to vote war credits until it was informed what took place at the Crown Council; it knew the important nature of that council and was aflame with suspicion. We are further told that the Reichstag still remains in that state, that the dismissal of BETHMANN has not changed it, and it is evident that the Reichstag thoroughly understands the nature of the conference, whether it has received any information about its details or not. It seems altogether likely that the German people has now arrived at the point where it must fight or submit.

MOBILIZATION.

New York had an impressive reminder yesterday that this country has embarked on a huge military enterprise. From morning until night many of the streets were filled with soldiers. The formal mobilization of the National Guard had begun. In a sense, a large part of this branch of our army had already been mobilized. The fact that so many of the National Guard have been on duty under the Federal Government since the beginning of our war, and that so many more of them have recently had the advantage of hard field training on the Mexican border, has led to the belief that they are soon to depart for the seat of war. But, as a matter of fact, nobody knows yet how soon the National Guardsmen are going to France or just how many of them are going. This country is not to be denuded of trained soldiers. The statement by Major Gen. GORGAS that Southern camps have been selected for this contingent because rain is infrequent in Winter in the regions where the camp sites have been chosen and the soldiers will not have to be protected from fresh air, may be taken as an indication that many of them are to be trained in the United States for some months before their departure.

All men under arms want to go to France and to go now. That is understandable and commendable. But some must inevitably be disappointed. It is an assured fact that the need of military protection at home will not be ignored by the Government. Nevertheless, the people who looked admiringly upon the thousands of sturdy and erect young men in the streets yesterday may be sure that a reasonable number of them, early in the Autumn, will be undergoing their last round of training just behind the French or Belgian battle line. Good luck to them all. They will fitly represent the spirit of their country in the great conflict with maddened autocracy.

In three weeks the entire National Guard will be mobilized, regularly enrolled as Federal troops, and in the camps prepared for them. They will number about 300,000. At that time the selective draft for the national army, our third contingent of warriors, will be well under way. The selection of numbers by lot from the 10,000,000 registered may begin this week; if not, it will begin early next week. It will be slow and tedious work, in spite of the best efforts of the exemption boards and the War Department. But we have started in the right direction. Our plans are taking shape. The Germans will take note that we are making serious business of our share in the world war. There is no longer any doubt that we shall have a million men in arms and ready for battle next Spring. The tramp of marching men, the sound of the bugles in the streets heard yesterday, will be familiar all over the country in the days to come.

THE NEXT LIBERTY LOAN.

The Governor of our Reserve Bank and Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee takes time by the forelock in his recommendation that every possible buyer of the next offering should make preparation now. The first offering will not be paid for until the end of August, but the suggestion is rather timely than premature. The reason is, as Governor STRONG explains, that it is undesirable that the Government's bonds should be bought either with bank funds or bank loans. The best source of money for the war is money intercepted in its natural course toward the banks. It is hardly likely that there is any money hoarded among us, except by carelessness or the miser's instinct. If there is any such idle money, it is plain that it would be money in the owner's pocket if it were put at work earning interest in such a cause as smashing Kaiserism. It would be substituting profit for loss. The same is true of wage money diverted from pleasure or waste toward the upkeep of the Sammies. Savings banks might pay a little more, but without the satisfaction of safeguarding democracy.

The reason why putting such moneys into Liberty bonds is better than using bank funds in any form is well stated by Governor STRONG. The more "money" there is in circulation, and the same is true of bank funds, the easier it is to get it, and therefore the more easily it is spent. The result is that the spenders raise prices for what they buy, since sellers find it so easy to get what they ask. It makes no difference in prices whether the money spent is gold, or bank notes, or bank credit. They are interchangeable in this country, and there is no premium on any of them. Rather it may be said that there is a discount on all of them, for they buy less goods than they used to, or than they would if they were less easily parted with. The best way to stop the increase in the cost of living is to buy Liberty bonds instead of goods, so far as that can be done.

It is equally the duty of patriots to themselves and their country to increase the demand for bonds and reduce the demand for unnecessary goods. If the bonds are in urgent demand, their price will be sustained and the war can be fought with cheap money. If the demand for goods is limited, they will become plenty, although the amount of goods may not be increased. The high prices are in face of larger quantities than ever before were demanded. There is no scarcity of goods in general, with a few exceptions for specific causes. There is excess of demand, not deficiency of supply. The best way to boom the bonds and to break the burden of prices is to keep money out of the banks and put it into Liberty bonds.

It is singular for a banker to advise against the stimulation of bank business. It may puzzle those who think that Wall Street is wholly wicked, and that there must be some hidden motive, because the reasoning is so simple and sufficient. The fact is that the Wall Street opinion which is worthy of attention has no liking for things hard to understand. Governor STRONG's Wall Street is wedded to old ways, and relies upon the law of supply and demand more than upon almost anything else, and especially more than upon any statute. Demand raises the price of other goods, but the greater the demand for bonds the lower the interest it is necessary to promise to sell them. The cheaper a bond can be bought, the better is the bargain for the bond buyer.

What is sold with a bond is income, and the less paid for the income promised the better the bargain. As the price falls the yield rises. That is why the discount on the Liberty bonds makes them more attractive. The best way to cheapen both the war and the cost of living is to create such a demand for Liberty bonds that they can be sold at the lowest interest paid by any country at this time.

THIS WAY OUT FROM TAMMANY HALL.

The sachems and the werowances of Fourteenth Street have seen all too many desertions from their altruist tribe of late years, and still the young braves continue to seek other wigwams. Among 150 names of the Organization Committee of the City Democracy, the young and hearty organization which is to help re-elect Mayor MITCHEL and to fight Tammany permanently, are many Tammany recruits, men who have worked for Tammany, been active lieutenants and captains in its municipal campaigns. Members of Tammany clubs have joined the City Democracy. In some cases whole clubs have come over, such as the Sagamore, whose rolls are illustrious with the name of Mr. RICHARD CROKER, the Sagamore whose name makes its rush to the enemy portentous to the worshippers of St. Tammany.

The old experience of these graduates of the East Fourteenth Street college must make its Faculty full of gooseflesh. Taking the worst view of their motives, as Tammany must, their departure indicates their belief that the Hall is beaten and broken. For some years Tammany has been growing weaker. Assume, for the sake of argument, that every Tammany refugee in the City Democracy is but a self-seeking politician eager to be on the winning side. The augury is doleful to the faithful who remain behind.

No selfish motive is attributed, of course, save by the eaters of sour grapes in East Fourteenth Street, to the Tammany recruits. "We never realized," says Mr. MARTIN W. LITTLETON, Chairman of the City Democracy, "how eager the young Democrats are "to join an earnest Democratic move- "ment which aims to continue good "government in New York."

What hold upon young men, indeed, has Tammany, with its ancient malodorous history, its crass leadership, its low standard of political morals, its ebbing vitality? Young men are full of idealism, and they admire strength. They see them in Mayor MITCHEL's administration.

CENSORSHIP AS IT SHOULD BE.

"And now I saw what I ought to have seen in the first place," Robinson Crusoe was accustomed to say when he found himself in a tight place. After a delay which it is impossible to account for or explain, the Government is about to put into effect a censorship of outgoing messages by cable or wireless telegraph. According to a statement made in Washington, this censorship will put an effectual ban upon messages which might convey information of military value to the enemy, to whatever part of the world they may be directed, not merely Europe, but Asia, Africa, and the countries to the south of us. All messages will be examined by censors before transmission. There will be no interference with the ordinary communications of business, or with any that are manifestly innocent. Messages that tell of our military preparations will be stopped altogether, while those which excite the legitimate suspicions of the censor, because through the arrangement of words or otherwise they might have a hidden meaning, will undergo changes that will baffle the sender's wicked purpose, if he had any such purpose.

This is censorship as it should be. From the beginning it has been urged upon the Government, for obviously it should have been the first step in safeguarding information about our naval and military preparations against enemy spies and agents operating here. It was absurd to impose a censorship upon messages sent from Europe to this country, oftentimes conveying information already long and well known to the enemy, while giving him the benefit of the open door for messages telling about our war measures. The policy we have been late in adopting is the true one. To the extent that we can cut off Germany altogether from the outside world, from receiving either food, munitions, materials, commodities of all kinds, or information about the steps taken to bring her to terms, we shall shorten the war.

NONPARTISAN JUDGES.

The Fusion Committee of 1917 has appointed a nonpartisan committee of twenty-five to consider nominations for Judges to be elected next Fall, and to select the best-qualified candidates, without regard to politics. The political opinions of a Judge are utterly irrelevant to his fitness for the bench, and the principle of a nonpartisan judiciary has been making its way, steadily if slowly, in recent years. The united nomination by Republicans and Democrats of Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals who have served acceptably there should be expected by the public; and the same is true of Justices of the State Supreme Court.

The terms of Associate Judge CARDOZO and Associate Judge MCLAUGHLIN of the Court of Appeals expire on Dec. 31. Both were appointed by the Governor from the State Supreme Court. Both are able and upright Judges, conspicuously deserving a full term.

The cases of these two Judges illustrate the nonpartisan principle. Judge CARDOZO happens to be a Democrat, Judge MCLAUGHLIN a Republican. That is a trivial detail of their biography. The people of the State have scanty interest in the politics of their Judges. That concerns mainly the deep-revolving cogitations of professional politicians. All the people of the State have a vital interest in the ability and integrity of the Court of Appeals.

The same considerations, integrity and high qualification, apply, or should apply, to all Judges. These officers, within their respective spheres of authority, are more important in the life of the community than the great posts of administration. From pettiest to highest court, justice—clear, intelligent justice—should come. Is not justice one? Is there a Democratic, a Republican, a Progressive, a Prohibition justice? One might think so from the small politics that so often enters into judicial nominations. Fortunately, the nonpartisan theory and practice have gained ground.

ANOTHER SHIPPING DISAPPOINTMENT.

The public knows General GOETHALS better than Mr. DENMAN, and likes him well on account of his professional capacity. Nevertheless, the public's sympathies were rather with Mr. DENMAN in the shipping controversy because the public thinks more of getting ships than of either or both the disputants. Sympathy shifted to General GOETHALS when he announced that he had contracted for 1,218,000 tons of wooden ships and for 642,800 tons of steel ships, although he had been thought by some to be prejudiced in favor of steel construction. But yesterday it was announced that this concession had not pacified the wooden ship party, and the entire program is hindered for further consultation. That would seem to indicate rather a personal controversy than the preference of public interests. In that there is but a minimum of interest, and only the Junkers will be glad.

Probably more steel ships will be built than wooden in the end, for there never was any dispute that they are better ships. There is a limit to wooden ship production, even if Mr. DENMAN should get another half billion, as he has asked. And there is a limit even to steel ship production, for there are other imperative uses for steel. It would be unfortunate if rivalry were carried to the bitter end of a quarrel in the face of the enemy. If either party prevailed, there would be a reduction in the possible output of the ships needed to carry our forces abroad and to keep up their supplies, to say nothing of supporting our allies. The result of hearty co-operation of both factions would be the possibility of producing five millions of tonnage in eighteen months.

It is a great effort even for the strongest and richest country in the world. Remembering the necessity of simultaneously raising an army, the labor problem is as great as the material problem. The money problem is hardly worth discussing. The cost of the ships is not to be weighed against the cost of building them under other conditions, but against the cost of not having them when our own men may be hungry and our allies fainting. The cost of merchant shipping is small compared with the cost of naval warfare. A submarine may sink a ten-million-dollar battleship in a minute. An hour's naval battle will cost hundreds of millions in money value, apart from the incalculable cost of victory or defeat. The little affair of Jutland is said to have cost $200,000,000, although only a small part of the opposing fleets was engaged.

With factors of these proportions, it is hypercriticism to discuss details of General GOETHALS's plan. Somebody must decide, and his decision is entitled to presumptive approval until contrary cause is shown beyond any doubt. Ordinarily it would be difficult to use such reasoning. But time is worth any amount of money now. It is a mere detail that the Government proposes to assume any increased labor cost, and even to assume on behalf of the contractors overtime pay, or increase of pay and decrease of efficiency by night work. The sufficient reason is the public interest in speed. There is no question of regulating profits or prices in the Goethals plan. It is a plan for production above every other consideration. Now let General GOETHALS and Mr. DENMAN "go to it." They have talked enough, and the country has other things to think of than the merits of their dispute.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Queenstown's Share of the Lusitania Horror.

Immediately after the Lusitania murders the people of Queenstown were tireless in succoring the afflicted and helping in the identification of the dead. Their Town Hall was transformed into a morgue. More than a thousand bodies of the victims were buried in Queenstown cemetery. A correspondent of The Evening Post notes as a psychological effect the present reluctance of Queenstown people to do anything that may recall the horrors of those days to their minds. The Town Hall has not been used since the last victim was interred. It is occupied only by the Town Clerk. The market of the farmers and dairymen has been placed elsewhere. Three rough mounds mark the last resting place of the victims, and these mounds are not cared for. Some day, when remembrance of the murders is more bearable, Queenstown will erect a suitable memorial on the site. The grass is allowed to grow now until it is cut for hay. This becomes the property of a poorly paid caretaker.

This state of feeling in Queenstown is not unnatural, and we do not know that it is to be deplored. The old Irish city had its full share of horrors at the time of the German outrage and it has had its afflictions since. The dead rest as easily under the rough mounds as they would under well-trimmed, flower-adorned graves surmounted by an air-braving shaft. After the war will be time enough to erect an artificial memorial to these innocent victims of blood lust. Surely no such memorial is needed at present to keep their martyrdom fresh in the minds not only of Queenstown people but of the whole civilized world.

Hell Gate and the Submarines.

There is a superfluity of reasons why Hell Gate should be made thoroughly navigable, without restraint either by shallow water or by swirling tides. The war and the desirability of facilitating naval movements emphasize the evident advantages of having alternative routes for our fleet to and from our leading navy yard. An enemy would have to divide his force to watch two entrances, and we could mass our battleships at either entrance at will. There is a further consideration drawn from the more likely prospect that any venture of the German commanders on this side of the ocean would rather be with submarines than with fighting ships. Submarines are most effective where commerce is thickest and wherever they dare venture. The pirates find scant pickings in the open sea. It is as hard for them to find victims there as it is for battleships to protect commerce throughout the entire seven seas.

There is no more attractive hunting ground for submarines than the comparatively narrow channels leading out from the largest port in the world. No submarine able to reach the channels could fail to find something to sink. But if there were two entrances the force of submarines would have to be doubled, for Hell Gate would be as navigable for commerce as for battleships. No lurking murder ship could watch two entrances at once, or could tell whether any especially rich ship would get to sea through the Sound or by way of the Sandy Hook route. Thus the Hell Gate improvement would halve the power of enemy submarines as well as double both our naval and our commercial power in times of war like this. The cost would be only that of a single battleship, and the advantage would be felt wherever goods are sold to "go foreign" through this world.

In other words, the farmers of the West are as much interested in the Hell Gate improvement as the manufacturers of the East. It is a pity that the farmers have not seen this until now, but the submarines which sink especially cargoes of foodstuffs may open the eyes of the raisers of those cargoes.

West Virginia's Comprehensive Labor Law.

A queer West Virginia plan to solve the problem of the shortness of labor has been mentioned, though it has never been regarded seriously. But the publication of the State law passed May 19 in the Congressional Record, at the instance of Senator SHERMAN of Illinois, who calls it a "very sensible move," corrects the general impression that it was a joke. The lawmakers of West Virginia gravely voted that all able-bodied male residents of the State must work at least thirty-six hours a week. The law became effective June 19. Only bona fide students during the school term are exempt, and the law is to be operative while the war lasts. The work must be in "some lawful and recognized business, profession, occupation, or employment whereby he may contribute to the support of himself and those legally dependent on him," and all persons whatsoever who do not so work are to be apprehended as vagrants and set to road-mending. There's a law for you.

A man may have been supporting his family in luxury for years, but that does not count. He must work six hours a day. The results of the operation of the law in the last month are not at present accessible. It was noticeable that Senator NORRIS of West Virginia, whose permission was asked before the printing of the law in the Record was ordered, took no further notice of it, and, after this little diversion, went on talking about the prices of canned goods and the profits of canners. The debate was on the Food bill and Senator SHERMAN used that reference to the production of the West Virginia Solons to delay action on the Food bill. So far as it is designed to round up the idlers, loungers, and petty gamblers, the intent of the law is good enough. But its wording is amazing. If it could be literally enforced, woe to the Supreme Court Justice who finds only four or five hours of work to do daily in the Summer months, woe to the literary person who reduces his stint in the vacation season, and to the architect who, finding business dull, cuts his office hours to two or three a day. But such laws are not enforced. They are not passed for that purpose. The West Virginia legislators were just "doing their bit."

THE CATERPILLAR PEST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice a letter in your issue of this morning urging that this department show increased activity in combating the present caterpillar pest from which the city is suffering.

I take this opportunity of assuring your correspondent and the readers of THE TIMES that this department is leaving nothing undone in order to successfully control the situation. Not only have the regular tree force of the department been doing this work exclusively for several weeks past, but a large force of laborers from other branches of departmental work have been also given over to the business of putting an end to the abnormal conditions that we have been facing. The present scourge is the worst one the city has suffered from in many years.

There are but two methods of fighting this type of caterpillar. The first is to remove the egg masses. If it were possible to remove all egg masses deposited in the city, we might be rid of these destructive insects by destroying the egg masses wherever found. However, the egg masses are deposited not only on the trees and shrubs, but on buildings, fences, benches, and other structures. It would be utterly impossible to obtain a large enough force to clean all these places of the egg masses, and the best that we can do is to remove egg masses where they appear on trees and shrubs in the parks, since this department has no authority to enter upon premises where such egg masses appear outside of the parks and streets.

The only other method of combating the tussock moth caterpillar is to spray the foliage upon which it feeds with a poisonous solution. This the department set out to do, but this year we have been greatly handicapped by the abnormal amount of rain. Frequently when the trees have been sprayed so as to leave an arsenate of lead coating on the leaves, a rain storm has immediately followed which removed from them this protection, so that the caterpillars were free to eat the foliage. The spraying machines have therefore done less effective work on account of these weather conditions.

The problem has been also made more difficult from the fact that the moth has made its appearance simultaneously and a month later than usual. There are years when there is no caterpillar visitation. But in those years when there was such a plague some of the egg masses have always hatched sooner than others, so that we were not obliged to attack all points at the same time. But this year, owing to the late season, the egg masses hatched simultaneously all over the city, so that the attack of the caterpillars was made by equipment which, while adequate to meet continuous hatching, was not sufficient to meet simultaneous hatching.

I foresaw that this situation might arise at some time in the future, and, therefore, after repeated requests by this department, in the budget of 1917 there was provided an additional amount of spraying apparatus. This was ordered the very day that legal authorization was secured, but delay in manufacturing and later in delivery has been prolonged owing to the war conditions of the manufacturers and the railroads.

Meanwhile, the department has had all available equipment and extra supply of labor continuously at work to meet the situation as it develops, and the reports received today show that the pest is now being controlled.

CABOT WARD,
Commissioner of Parks.
New York, July 16, 1917.

If Germany Would Do This.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From my intercourse with the men of the German revolution of 1848 I am satisfied that, in their opinion, the following propositions, if adopted by the Government and the people of Germany, would lead to an early establishment of a permanent peace:

First—That the Constitution of the German Empire be so modified that in the future the representatives of the people of Germany, in their legislative capacity, shall have the sole power of making war and concluding peace, instead of this power of making war and concluding peace being invested in the Kaiser and the Bundesrat, as is the case under the present Constitution of the German Empire.

Second—That the members of the Reichstag, and also the members of the legislative bodies of the various States composing the German Empire, be hereafter elected under a universal suffrage by secret ballot.

Third—That, to accomplish this, the Kaiser and the Bundesrat must surrender to the Reichstag the sole power they now possess of declaring war and concede to the people universal suffrage. That, should the Kaiser and the Bundesrat refuse to surrender this power and concede universal suffrage, the German people, supported by the rank and file of the army, would be warranted and justified in deposing the Kaiser and establishing a republic.

Fourth—That, in concluding a peace, all the nations involved in this war shall agree and bind themselves to use submarines and air machines only as an instrument of war against the armed forces of an enemy, and that their use in destroying merchant vessels involving the loss of life, and in the attacking of cities and unarmed civilian populations, for the purpose of intimidation, shall be interdicted by international law, and that in the future the violation of such an agreement by any nation shall be construed as a declaration of war against all the rest of the nations.

Should the Constitution of the German Empire be so modified as here indicated, Germany would be brought into harmony with the political convictions of a large majority not only of the people of Europe but also of the rest of the peoples of the world, and with the German Government so modified a movement for the establishment of peace could be successfully inaugurated and friendly relations between the nations re-established.

THE HEROES OF THE DUNES.

After reading the account by Philip Gibbs.

Red were the dunes, red was the sky,
Red-winged the gulls went screaming by;
While in the waste of sand and blood,
Boyish and brave, six heroes stood.
Splendid they stood there, all unknown,
Nameless and fearless they fought alone,—
Fought unyielding that awful day;
Six boys holding the foe at bay.

Red was the Yser, red with blood,
Some have striven to cross the flood;
Six were left—just six; the tears
One looked back and saw them stand
There alone in the crimsoned sand.
Round them the dead and dying lay—

Sluggish and cold the Yser creeps
Back of the dunes where valor sleeps.
Mourn, O world, for their pain and loss;—
But above them a mighty cross
Rises forever. No names are writ—
Yet uncovered men bow to it—
Telling with tears about that day;

WHISTLERS IN ART MUSEUM.

A Sargent Also Among the Pictures and Books of H. B. Dick Bequest.

Pictures and books from the Harris B. Dick bequest are interesting features of the recent accessions of the Metropolitan Museum of Art announced yesterday. The ninety-nine lithographs and four woodcuts by Whistler, which are an important feature of the Dick collection, are shown in the Department of Prints in the new galleries in Wing J, where they will remain until October.

There are two Whistlers among the paintings, which are shown in the Recent Accessions Room on the first floor: "Scene On the Mersey," water color, a dock in the foreground, with a distant line of shore, which ends in a lighthouse. "The Bead Stringers of Venice" is a pastel by Whistler, showing two women at work on a narrow terrace between the canal and a house, which is hung with a scarf of pink.

The largest of the Dick paintings is "The Marble Quarry at Carrara," by John S. Sargent, a fine rugged picture, with rough blocks of marble, which are being manipulated by the workmen, the steep face of a rock showing beyond the marble-covered plateau, all in dull tones of gray and yellow, the rosy sun glow of the sunlight on a distant mountain peak giving the only touch of warmth. There is a Cazin, at one time in the collection of the French actor Coquelin, "The Faubourg de Charenton," a night scene, with a few lights showing a quiet street with irregular buildings and a narrow stream.

Two portraits and a Revolutionary sword come from a bequest by George Willett Van Nest, who died in the Spring of 1916. One of the portraits is of Colonel Marinus Willetts, in Revolutionary uniform, by an unknown artist, and the other a portrait of his wife and child, by John Vanderlyn. The museum already has three portraits of men by this artist. The sword is the one shown in the portrait, a dress sword of fine workmanship and in excellent preservation. It is in a scabbard of white shagreen, with an original mounting. The hilt is of silver, with incrustations of gold in different colors. The fuscau of the sword bears the design of an eagle, and it is supposed that the weapon was the work of an American civilian, one of those whose fine craftsmanship is seen in the early watches of this country. The museum authorities say that it is, as far as they know, the richest sword of the Revolutionary period made in the United States. It compares favorably with European workmanship.

An interesting piece of mediaeval loom work, blue and white umbrian weave, from Perugia, has been presented to the museum by Mrs. Edward S. Harkness. This is on exhibition in the Recent Accessions Room. The big collection of laces and textiles of the museum has been withdrawn from exhibition for the present, but will be shown later in the new galleries. In the meantime, it is available for students in the basement of Wing F, in the Study Room of Textiles.

Patrons of the museum will be interested in a change in the staff. The resignation of Durr Friedley, Acting Curator of the Department of Decorative Arts, has been accepted, and the former Assistant Curator of the Department, Joseph Breck, will return to become its head. Mr. Breck left the museum to become Director of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, where he has been for the last three years.

Among the recently elected members of the museum is Mrs. A. R. Milton, fellow for life (paying $1,000), and sustaining members (paying $25), Mrs. George Owen Knapp, Miss Eufrasia Leland, Mrs. Charles Mather MacNeill, Mrs. Julian Robbins, and Mrs. Seth Low Pierrepont. Two hundred and thirty-four annual members, paying $10 each, were elected.

A. P. DECISION IN FORCE.

Final Order Filed In Action Against International News Service.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals having sustained the action of Judge A. N. Hand of the Federal District Court in restraining the International News Service, which is controlled by William R. Hearst, from pirating news gathered by The Associated Press for the exclusive use of its own members, the final order, which puts the injunction into effect, was filed yesterday. Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the defendant, sought to delay the filing of the order by seeking a stay from both the Circuit and District Courts, and also from a Justice of the United States Supreme Court. He failed in each case.

The order restrains the International concern from the following practices which it was accused of having been guilty of:

(A) From inducing, procuring, or permitting any telegraph editors or other employes or agents of the complainant or any of its members or of any newspaper or newspapers owned or represented by them or any of such members, to communicate to defendant or to permit defendant to take or appropriate, for consideration or otherwise, any news received from or on behalf of complainant, and from purchasing, receiving, selling, transmitting, or using any news so obtained.

(B) From inducing or procuring, directly or indirectly, any of complainant's members or any of the newspapers representing them, to violate any of the agreements fixed by the charter and by-laws of the complainant.

(C) From copying, obtaining, taking, selling, transmitting, or otherwise gainfully using or from causing to be copied, obtained, taken, sold, transmitted, or otherwise gainfully used the complainant's news, either bodily or in substance, from bulletins issued by the complainant, or any of its members, or from editions of newspapers published by any of complainant's members, until its commercial value as news to the complainant and all of its members has passed away.

The Associated Press is also subject to Paragraph C. The court found it had not been guilty of any of the offenses enumerated in that paragraph, but the plaintiff declared its willingness to submit to the restrictions set forth.

WILSON CABLES TO FRANCE.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Messages exchanged by President Wilson and President Poincaré on the French national holiday, July 14, were made public today by the State Department. President Wilson cabled:

On this anniversary of the birth of democracy in France, I offer on behalf of my countrymen, and on my own behalf, fraternal greeting as befits the strong ties that unite our peoples who today stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of liberty in testimony of the steadfast purpose of our two countries to achieve victory for the sublime cause of the rights of the people against oppression.

The lesson of the Bastille is not lost to the world of free peoples. May the day be near when on the ruins of the dark strongholds of unbridled power and conscienceless autocracy a nobler structure, upbuilt like our great Republic on the eternal foundations of peace and right, shall arise to gladden an enfranchised world.

President Poincaré replied:

The French people who for three years have made so many heroic sacrifices in the defense of right and liberty shall receive in grateful emotion the brotherly message which you, Mr. President, were pleased to send me for them.

We shall be proud to carry on to victory, elbow to elbow with the great and generous American nation, the war which was let loose on the world by the imperialism of our foes, in spite of the strenuous efforts which the French Republic always exerted to avert so awful a cataclysm. I, like you, have no doubt that the defeat of autocracy and German militarism will at last open a future of industrious peace and prosperity to liberate mankind.

Our Fleet Will Visit Argentina.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Secretary Daniels announced today that he had ordered Admiral Caperton, commanding the South Atlantic squadron, to visit Buenos Aires, accepting the invitation of the Argentine Government. Argentina agreed to waive all neutral restrictions, so that the American war vessels will enjoy the same privileges at Buenos Aires as at Rio de Janeiro and at Montevideo. Argentina is expected soon to renounce her neutrality, severing diplomatic relations with Germany at the same time.

TAMMANY LOOKING FOR FUSION MAYOR

Wants in a Hurry a Candidate That Other Organizations Will Accept.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS ANGERED

League Objects to Martin W. Littleton's Assertion That City Democracy Is Attracting Many Recruits

Energetic efforts will be made this week by organizations opposed to the re-election of Mayor Mitchel to unite on a candidate that will meet with the approval of Tammany Hall. Realizing that the Republican fusion movement of 1917 is making rapid headway, Tammany is concentrating all its efforts to bring forward a candidate who will be acceptable to these organizations with a view of coalescing all the anti-Mitchel forces. Having announced its platform, the principal plank of which is municipal ownership, Tammany wants to get a Mayoralty candidate in the field as soon as possible.

It was expected last night that the Business Men's League, which is said to be working in sympathy with Tammany, would announce its candidate for the head of the city ticket, but after a dozen or more members of the organization had discussed the matter for several hours at the headquarters, 50 East Forty-second Street, it was announced that no agreement had been reached. The league has announced that it is looking for a business man for Mayor, and during the discussion these names were considered more than any others: Justice James C. Cropsey of Brooklyn, Preston P. Lynn, general manager for John Wanamaker and President of the Sphinx Club; Marcus M. Marks, Borough President; Bird S. Coler, former Controller; Victor J. Dowling, Justice of the Appellate Division; Robert L. Dowling, President of the City Investing Company, and John F. Hylan, County Judge of Brooklyn. Petitions favoring these candidates were presented to the Committee on Candidates.

A boom for John F. Galvin, Commissioner of the Board of Water Supply, as the Democratic fusion candidate for Mayor, has developed. His friends interested last night that he meets all the requirements of a successful candidate.

The Young Men's Democratic League took exception yesterday to the statement of Martin W. Littleton, Chairman of the City Democracy, that many young Democrats have joined the movement to establish a new democratic organization in this city. In a letter to Mr. Littleton, Frank D. Shelley, President of the league, said:

"Since Mayor Mitchel has been in office he has not appointed one young Democrat to a Magistrate's office, and there have been nine appointments made all directly benefiting Republicans of New York, Brooklyn, and Queens, upon the recommendation of such leaders as Koenig, Kracke, Knewitz, and De Bragga. For Tax Commissioners the Mayor has appointed applicants indorsed by Republican district leaders only. Mayor Mitchel is not a true Democrat, and in the last campaign he was massively opposed to the re-election of our President.

"Looking over your committee of 150 we find a group of disgruntled office-seeking politicians. The Democratic Party is a party for the young who believes in true democracy. What right have you to call yourself a leader of any city democracy when you are a resident of Nassau County and perhaps pay taxes there?"

Mr. Shelley said his organization, with headquarters at 1,398 Broadway, had a membership of 10,127 young Democrats.

Peter J. Brady, President of the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council, sent to all the labor unions in the city yesterday copies of three resolutions passed at the twenty-first annual convention of the Allied Printing Trades Council, held at Syracuse last week. One denounced Mayor Mitchel's appointment of A. C. Wessman to the Board of Education as "obnoxious and insulting to the working people of the City of New York." Mr. Wessman was appointed to succeed Thomas J. Carroll, a former President of the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council. A second placed the J. C. Tapley Bookbinding Company, of which A. C. Wessman is President, on the unfair list, and copies of these resolutions were ordered sent to Mayor Mitchel so he might be apprised of the printing trades' attitude toward the appointment of Mr. Wessman while there was a strike on in the Tapley company's plant."

The third resolution calls on all labor organizations in New York to join in the fight against Mayor Mitchel to defeat "this champion of the classes against the masses." The defeat is asked because of the "domination of the City Government by the Rockefeller Foundation and the Garyization of the public schools." To discuss placing the name of a labor man on each ticket in the five boroughs for the office of Sheriff, County Clerk, or Registrar, 1, labor men representing each of the labor unions in the city met at 241 East Forty-fifth Street last night. A committee was appointed to confer this afternoon with the Fusion Conference Committee when the names of the labor men will be announced for consideration by that body.

At a meeting of the Nominating Committee of the Municipal Federation held last night in the Hotel Astor, a subcommittee was appointed to attend both the Fusion and the Democratic Conventions when the municipal candidates will be chosen, and to make a report of the proceedings to the organization. The following members were chosen to serve on this committee: A. H. Sarosohn, Chairman; Samuel Jesse Buzzell, Secretary; Michael V. Newman, George W. Eakins, Lewis Soll, Henry Green, and Abraham Fripti.

Mayor Mitchel returned to the city yesterday, but refused to discuss the political situation in any way. He will proceed on his vacation again today.

OUTGOING CABLES NOW TO BE CENSORED

Scrutiny of All Messages Will Be in Full Force and Effect by End of Week.

WATCH ON SENDERS, TOO

Suspicious Messages Will Be Followed Up Here and Abroad—Incoming Press Matter Exempt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—By the end of the week the Government censorship of all outgoing cablegrams will be in full force and effect in accordance with the program outlined in a Washington dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES recently. There has been a gradual tightening of the censorship until now it is being applied generally to most outgoing messages. A large force of additional censors was required to make the plan operative, and it is now assured that these will be at work within a few days.

The censorship will apply to press as well as to private dispatches. Much of the complaint that led to the consideration of making the censorship complete was based on the statements that the censors permitted to be sent to newspapers in South America, and in one case to a newspaper in the Orient, dispatches which contained half-truths that represented conditions in this country as very bad. Some of those messages contained military information which the officials are now convinced was intended to be transmitted to Germany through neutral countries.

"If what officials say is correct, there will be no censorship whatever on incoming press cable messages intended for publication. The Government will depend on the British and French censorship to prevent the transmission of any matter which should not, in their opinion, be given to the American public, but generally the position is taken here that with an efficient outgoing censorship there should be no cause for concern over publications in this country.

One new feature of the censorship will be a "follow up" system under which agents of the Government will investigate the senders of suspicious messages in this country and agents abroad will be instructed to find out something about those to whom the messages were addressed.

Delay in putting a strict censorship into effect has been due to a large extent, it is understood, to objection to the appointment of the considerable number of additional censors required. The censors were naval officers and enlisted men rated as electricians and civilian volunteers who were serving the Government for nominal compensation merely to help out in the war. Some of the civilian censors felt that the system was to be extended with considerable more work for them they should have authority similar to that of the naval officers and they applied for commissions in the reserve navy. Objection to granting these commissions has been overcome and some of the civilian censors will receive the rank of ensign, the lowest commissioned grade, while others will be rated as chief petty officers.

The military censorship along the Mexican border has been tightened and a constant effort is being made to prevent military information from reaching Germany by way of South America, whence it has been transmitted to the European coast by wireless and to Germany overland through neutral countries.

BLAMES CAPITAL POLICE.

Malone Says They Could Have Dispersed Crowd About Suffragists.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Severe criticism of the manner in which the Washington police handled the suffrage demonstration last Saturday was made in the District Branch of the Police Court today by Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, when sixteen suffragettes faced Judge Mullowny.

Mr. Malone, who witnessed the demonstration, told Judge Mullowny, that he, a former police officer, could have dispersed the White House crowd without any trouble.

The contention made by the suffragettes in court was that there would not have been any crowd had there been a sufficient number of policemen on duty at the time. They asserted that Captain Carl Flather, who had charge of the police at the White house on Saturday, purposely allowed the crowd to gather in order that the suffragists might be charged with obstructing traffic on the sidewalk.

Captain Flather testified that he was standing on the corner of Madison Place and H Street, and his attention was attracted by a large crowd opposite the Cameron House, a suffragist headquarters, half a block from the White House. He said he made no attempt personally to disperse the crowd, but he called a policeman who was in attendance at a nearby church wedding to drive the crowd away. He said that by the time the policeman arrived the women had started across the avenue toward the White House, followed by the policeman and himself. In the mean time some one, evidently not connected with the Police Department, had sent in a call for the reserves.

On cross examination by Miss Doris Stevens, who is counsel for the women, Captain Flather said that he did not have a sufficient number of policemen on hand to disperse the crowd, and that in his opinion the whole Police Department could not have driven the crowd away. Mr. Malone, who estimated the crowd at 200, told Judge Mullowny that any policeman in the country could disperse a small crowd without any trouble.

Judge Mullowny squirmed on the bench. "You are from New York," he said under his breath.

Then the Judge asked Mr. Malone if he was sure that he could disperse that crowd.

"Surely," said the Collector.

"Well, then, do you want a job on the Washington police force?"

Mr. Malone smilingly declined. He had a better job now, he said.

GERMANS COURT CZECHS.

AMSTERDAM, July 16.—It is reported from Vienna that the German members of the upper and lower houses of the Austrian Parliament have adopted jointly a resolution setting forth their desire for peace within the country and the possibility of living side by side with the Czechs without abridgment of the "national self-determination" of either elements.

The resolution says, however, that a separate Bohemian Constitution would not be recognized.

The adoption of this resolution was evidently prompted by the increasing unrest among the Czechs, an important element of Austria's population. They are reported to be out of sympathy with the militaristic policy of the Germans in Austria.

It is understood that one of the amendments to be proposed by the Administration would legalize the status of the Aircraft Production Board, now attached to the Defense Council, and would extend its powers.

NEGLECT LUSITANIA GRAVES

Queenstown Townsfolk Shun the Resting Place of U-Boat Victims.

QUEENSTOWN, July 3, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The newest memorial to be placed on the graves of the Lusitania victims is a bouquet of artificial flowers inclosed in a glass case, which also contains a woman's photograph and small marble cross with the inscription: "In memory of my dear wife, Margaret Butler, drowned on the Lusitania. Vengence is Mine, saith the Lord; I will repay." This and three rough mounds of earth are virtually all that mark the resting place of more than a thousand persons, who perished May 7, 1915, when a German submarine stunned the world by sending to the bottom of the ocean, twenty-three miles from here, the first transatlantic passenger steamship to be sunk by a torpedo.

There is a movement on foot to erect a great monument over these graves, but it is not likely to bear fruit until the end of the war.

A high official of the Cunard Steamship Company visited the graves recently and deprecated the fact that they were so neglected. He told the veteran Town Clerk, James Campbell, that he was making a report to his company with a view to co-operating with the British Government for a suitable monument, but expressed doubt if anything could be done in the midst of the world war.

Officers and men from American craft now in British waters have also made long overland pilgrimages to the graves and have given hearty support to the movement.

A correspondent of The Associated Press who a few days ago visited the burial place, which is situated in a greenwood on the cliffs behind this picturesque town, found grass growing afoot high over the three mounds marking as many huge graves, the largest containing seventy bodies, and the others fifty and twenty-seven, respectively. The Town Clerk apologized for the uncut grass, saying that it was allowed to grow until July 1, to enable the poorly-paid caretaker to procure hay. "After July 1," he said, "you will see a transformation."

The Town Council has just denied a request made by the relatives of Miss E. A. Secombe of Peterborough, N. H., to allow her body to be disinterred for burial in the United States, on the ground that the removal would be detrimental to the public health. It develops that the town medical authority has been busy ever since the catastrophe in declining numerous similar requests made by relatives of the victims in America and other countries.

The cemetery is seldom visited by any of the townspeople, who shun it because it brings back awful memories of the heart-breaking scenes enacted on that fatal May 7 two years ago. As showing the sentiment of these pious townsfolks, it is interesting to note that the Town Hall, which was turned into a temporary morgue on that occasion, has never been occupied by any one since, except Campbell, the Town Clerk.

CUT ENEMY'S BEARD; JAILED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 16.—The cutting off of the beard of Deputy Mafi had an amusing epilogue in court today when the prisoner, Tirletti, was interrogated. He declared that, acting as he did against Mafi, he had no intention of offending the deputy, but attacked him as an intransigeant Socialist who while Italy was at war worked in the interests of the Central Empires. He had a special grudge against Mafi because in the last sittings of the Chamber the Deputy laughed when Parliament commemorated those fallen on the battlefield.

The court nevertheless condemned Tirletti to 130 days in prison and 400 lire fine, ordering the confiscation of the man's scissors and the restitution of the precious cut beard to Mafi.

CATALONIANS WILL MEET.

Parliament Members to Press Demands on Government.

MADRID, July 16.—Barcelona newspapers publish a note saying that the assembly of members of Parliament from Catalonia will be held on Thursday, notwithstanding all denials, and that the organizers of the movement count on the support of a large part of the army.

Various defense committees, on the other hand, have held meetings to protest against any such manifestation. It is asserted the army will remain aloof from politics and obey the government.

Sixty Catalonian Senators and Deputies asked the Spanish government recently for administrative autonomy for all provinces, and decided to call a meeting of members of Parliament in Barcelona unless the Government summoned Parliament. The Government declined to convene Parliament.

It will ask the Governors to create educational bureaus in their State Defense Council or appoint special committees to carry on the educational work in their respective States. Besides the Governors the committee will interview the Chairmen of State Defense Councils, Commissioners of Education, and State Superintendents of Schools.

GIANTS GIVE WARM WELCOME TO CUBS

TESREAU TAKES TUMBLE

It has been the general impression that the Polo Grounds would never again be large enough to hold Umpire Lord Byron and Manager John J. McGraw at the same time. It was plenty large enough to hold both of them yesterday, with lots of room to spare. Byron made his first visit here since the McGraw uprising against him in Cincinnati. When they first met out on the field Byron looked due south and McGraw strained his neck to see what was going on up in the northern sky. Each time it was necessary for them to pass each other there was room enough between them to drive a hay wagon. It never became necessary for them to speak to each other.

Byron didn't come here to see McGraw. He was here to umpire the game between the Giants and the Chicago Cubs, which was won by New York by a 4 to 2 score. The crowd of some 6,000 hooted and jeered Byron so energetically that his announcements to the grandstand were drowned in the roar. Byron was as popular as snakes in Ireland. The question naturally arises, if Byron is hooted and hissed because McGraw knocked him down, what in the world would they do if Byron had landed first and knocked McGraw down? Call out the reserves?

The Cubs were a melancholy looking ball club yesterday. They displayed about as much speed as two messenger boys playing a game of chess. The only alarming thing they did yesterday was to knock Jeff Tesreau out of the box. Tesreau has been invited to leave ball games quite often lately and one explanation of it is that Jeff is what they call a sunshine pitcher. While the sun is shining on his manly figure he pitches to beat the cars, but as soon as the sun sinks behind Coogan's Bluff Jeff gets slammed hard and often.

Tesreau Is Removed.

In the seventh inning yesterday thunder clouds began to gather and it grew as dark as the last days of Pompeii. Right then and there the Cubs landed on Tesreau and pounded him off the mound. The theory of this is that it requires much heat to keep Jeff's pitching arm in working order.

The Cubs brought a new player here with them this trip. He is Pickles Dilhoefer of Milwaukee. He is a catcher, and is hailed as another Ray Schalk. Yesterday he resembled Schalk inasmuch as he had two hands and two feet, but in letting the ball get past him he closely resembled Ed. Sicking when he used to play with the Yanks.

Phil Douglas, who finished the game for the Cubs after Vaughn had retired for a pinch hitter in the seventh, disagreed forcibly with Lord Byron on several decisions. A great change has come over Byron. In the past he used to relish a kicking pitcher, so that he could wigwag him into oblivion. When Douglas kicked so hard yesterday, Byron looked sad and dejected. He didn't even answer Douglas's arguments. He was muzzled.

Fletcher Sends Kauff Home.

Herzog opened the third with a safe slap to right, and was forced by Kauff, who made an attempt to sacrifice. Zim plugged a single to right, pushing Benny to third. Fletcher's hit through short sent Kauff home. Doyle brought the inning to a close with a gorgeous sort of play when he stabbed Robertson's mischievous bounder and flipped him out at first.

Chicago got a brace of runs in the seventh. Williams singled to right and went down on a wild pitch. Deal walked and both occupants moved up on Wortman's sacrifice. After Dilhoefer hoisted to Zim, Wolter, batting for Vaughn, got an infield hit and scored Williams. When Zimmerman threw unruly to first Deal also scored. Flack doubled to right, Mann walked, and the bases were jammed.

Tesreau did the rightabout face, and was last seen squeezing his massive frame through a hole in the right-field fence. Benton came along and saved the Giants. Doyle being tossed out by Herzog for the final demise of that chapter.

Phil Douglas, who succeeded Vaughn, pitched himself out of a heap of trouble in the seventh. Benton greeted him with a double to left centre, and he went to third on a single by Burns. Herzog forced Burns at second and Kauff walked, loading the bases. Zim welted a liner to Doyle, who doubled Kauff at first.

DODGERS TOSS AWAY GAME.

Until Brooklyn outer guardians had an opportunity to toss the ball around in the eighth inning of the game with St. Louis at Ebbets Field yesterday, it was a splendid pitching argument between Lee Meadows of the Cardinals and Edward Pfeffer of the Dodgers. In that eighth frame most of the Superbas were mixed up in a wild throwing contest that allowed the Cardinals to add two runs to one collected in the first inning, and thereby take the opening game of the series by a score of 3 to 1.

Meadows really pitched much too well for the Dodgers even to hope for victory. After the third inning he did not allow a hit, and only one local man reached first base. This was Jimmy Johnston, who was passed with one out in the fifth and stole second, but remained at that station when the inning ended. Meadows struck out six opposing batsmen and allowed only three hits. The fielding of Betzel, who accepted ten fielding chances without a bobble, helped Meadows materially. Pfeffer did well until that eighth inning, when he had a hand in the donation of the pastime to the visitors.

Miller Huggins got so excited in the fourth inning of the game that he entered into an argument with a fan seated in the left field stand. This fan evidently told Huggins a few of the fine points of the game and in such a manner that Huggins felt no gratitude for the information. At any rate Huggins gave all the indications of a man trying to climb over a fence after the scalp of a neighbor until Umpire Rigler and several Cardinal players restrained the scrappy manager.

St. Louis lost no time getting the opening edge. Two vicious shots past the vigilant Mowrey in the opening inning gave Pfeffer a handicap. Jack Smith began with the first smash by third, went to second on Baird's sacrifice, to third on Long's infield out and registered when Hornsby slipped another past Mowrey.

Brooklyn had chances in the first and second innings, but could not tie up the game until the third. A pass and singles by Pfeffer and Olson filled the bases with two out in the second, but Johnston fouled out. Casey Stengel tied the count in the third with a terrific three-base shot to right centre. He completed the circuit on Wheat's sacrifice fly to right.

After avoiding all troubles for six innings, Pfeffer helped materially to throw away the game in the eighth. Two were out when Hornsby singled to centre. Cruise smashed safely to right. Stengel retrieved the ball and threw toward third to cut off Hornsby. Pfeffer intercepted the throw and made a fast toss in the general direction of second base, hoping to cut down Cruise, who had continued from first.

Pfeffer's throw went right back to Stengel. Hornsby scored and Cruise rounded third as if to dash for the plate. Stengel made another attempt to be useful with a throw to the plate, but this time it was Jimmy Johnston who cut in with a futile attempt to stop the ball. Johnston fumbled miserably and Cruise scored as the ball rolled into the St. Louis dugout. Another hit, an error by Olson and a hit batsman filled the bases, but Meadows ended the Brooklyn agony with a weak tap to the pitcher.

YANKEES KICK AWAY GAME FOR SHAWKEY

CLEVELAND, July 16.—Bob Shawkey today pitched shutout ball which should have carried the Yankees into third place, but Bob's supporting cast failed him at a critical time. New York picked up a lead in the fourth inning, held it until the sixth and then the infield tossed it away. The Indians got the verdict by 3 to 2.

The Indians did not make an earned run off Shawkey, and there was a taint on one of the two runs picked up by Donovan's team. Shawkey deserved to win. He easily outpitched Jim Bagby.

Every member of Donovan's inner guard made at least one mistake. First Peck neglected to cover second base after he had trapped Roth on the line and Maisel had chased Roth toward third. In the run down Pipp left first uncovered and could not get back for Harris after Roth returned safely to second. Baker made an error on O'Neill's grounder and slow work by Maisel let a runner score from third.

Maisel's failure to connect on an attempted squeeze play in the first inning lost a run. Peck had tripled to deep left with one down, and set out for the plate on the first ball pitched to Maisel. The latter missed an attempt to bunt, and Peck was an easy out.

In the fourth the Yanks put over two runs. Maisel opened the inning with a drive over Chapman's head and Pipp singled to centre, Maisel stopping at second. Baker was robbed of a hit when Harris made a great stop, but both runners advanced on the out. A pass to Miller filled the bases.

High hit to deep centre for what would have been a certain sacrifice fly, but Speaker fell just as he was about to catch the ball and the ball hit him. Maisel scored, Pipp reached third and Miller second. Nunamaker grounded to Evans, who threw out Pipp at the plate, but O'Neill trying to double Nunamaker at first, hit the catcher on the shoulder. The ball rolled away, allowing Miller to score. Shawkey ended the inning by striking out.

The Indians put over a run in the fifth inning. With one out O'Neill beat out a slow roller to Baker and advanced on the latter's throw past first. Bagby's single to centre sent O'Neill home.

In the sixth Roth walked and stole second. Harris hit to Peck in deep short. With no chance to get Haris, Peck faked a throw and pulled Roth off second base. Then he threw to Maisel, who chased Roth toward third. As Maisel threw to Baker, Roth turned back and made second because it was left uncovered, Graney's infield out advanced both runners. Smith batted for Evans and was purposely walked, filling the bases. Miller fumbled O'Neill's grounder and Roth scored. Baker then threw to Maisel in an attempt to force Smith, and Harris, who had come from second, continued on to the plate. He beat Maisel's slow return and this proved the winner.

ST. LOUIS, July 16.—Davenport held Boston to two hits today, and St. Louis shut out the world's champions, 2 to 0. Davenport did not give a hit until the sixth, when Hooper doubled. He was the only visitor to reach second, and was left there when Davenport fanned Hoblitzel for the third out.

St. Louis got a run in the fourth, when Pratt singled and scored on a single by Jacobson. In the sixth Sisler singled, stole second, and went to third when Barry failed to cover the base for Thomas's perfect throw. He scored on Severeid's single.

Work Eleven Innings in First to Beat Pirates by 8 to 7.

BOSTON, July 16.—Boston started its second home series with Pittsburgh today by taking two games, the first in eleven innings by the score of 8 to 7 and the second 7 to 2.

Each team made sixteen hits in the opener, which was a slam-bang affair, Boston using four pitchers and Pittsburgh two. The winning run came with none out in the eleventh on Kelly's double to left, Konetchy's scratch single, and Grimes's error on the late throw to first.

Barnes had things very much his own way in the second, after Boston made five runs off Jacobs in less than two innings.

Phillies Beat Reds, 1 to 0, in Fast Time of 1 Hour and 10 Minutes.

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—Wonderful fielding especially by Bancroft, marked the game in which Philadelphia defeated Cincinnati today 1 to 0. Alexander and Regan had a twirling duel which was finished in the remarkably fast time of one hour and ten minutes.

The lone tally was scored in the seventh inning. Whitted then led off with a double and took third when Roush muffed Cravath's fly. Regan threw Stock out and Whitted was caught at the plate when Paskert hit to McKechnie. Luderus's single scored Cravath. Johnny Evers made his debut with the Phillies and was presented with a big floral horseshoe.

Colonel Armstrong Captures Feature as Grand Circuit Season Opens.

CLEVELAND, July 16.—"Small time" campaigners stepped into the limelight at the opening of the Grand Circuit racing season at the North Randall track this afternoon, and followers of the trotters and pacers who supported the favorites were a crestfallen lot.

A heavy rain soaked the track and held up proceedings for more than an hour, making it late before the last heat of the fourth event was raced. As a result of the weather conditions the track was slow and the going was bad, particularly for the pacers.

The Edwards 2:10 $3,000 Racing Stake, the feature event of the card, went to Colonel Armstrong, a half-miler and an outsider, who had a hard fight with A Game of Chance. The two finished neck and neck in the final heat, the judges' decision being necessary to distinguish the winner. Loyal W., the favorite, failed to finish in the money

EXPORT LICENSE LIST ENLARGED BY BOARD

HOW TO USE THE LICENSES

Instructions to Shippers Given—No License Required for Exports to Canada.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—A long list of commodities were named by the Administrative Board of the Exports Council today as requiring licenses for shipment abroad, although they were not designated specifically in President Wilson's proclamation putting certain articles under expert control.

They are sulphur, saltpetre, nitrate of potash, benzol, rice, dried beans, peas, condensed milk, structural steel, shapes and mill steel, including angles, tees, beams, and channels; steel plates of ordinary tank quality, rolled steel floor plates, rosin and turpentine, washing powder, hand lantern oil, tuluol, lubricating oil, malt, steel plates, tank plates and boiler plates, soap and soap products, and vegetable oils.

The Administrative Board explained in the following statement how licenses may be surrendered both to the steamship company and the Custom House:

"The exporter receives the license in duplicate, and he turns both copies over to the steamship company in exchange for a steamship permit. The steamship company turns both the original and duplicate over to the customs authorities with their clearance papers.

"Difficulties arising where the goods covered by a license are not forwarded in one lot will be settled in one of several ways. In the first place, a man may apply for and receive as many licenses as he requires. A 'balance license' is being arranged for, to take care of any balance of goods which has not been shipped under the original license. A 'blanket license' is being arranged for which will cover specific commodities shipped by specific firms to certain countries.

"In the case of shipments to Canada, exporters are advised that steps have been taken to facilitate these shipments, and they need not apply for a specific license. Shipments to Canada may be forwarded as heretofore."

Secretary Redfield announced the appointment of J. A. Parker of New York as chief expert of the Bureau of Export Licenses. Mr. Parker, who had been at the head of the Export Division of the United States Steel Products Company, will keep a close watch on production in this country to see how far foreign demands may be met, and reports from American agents abroad on the final destinations of steel shipments will be made to him.

As the export control list is enlarged Secretary Redfield will name representatives from each group of industries to advise the bureau. Herbert Hoover will serve as the bureau's expert on food.

Reports from the Mexican border that Customs officials had held up market purchases made by Mexicans in the United States drew from the Bureau of Licenses today the statement that every effort would be made to do away with local inconveniences. There is no intention, it was said, to license small purchases, and Mexicans will continue to be permitted to carry their market baskets across the border as heretofore.

FEAR ENEMY TRADING ACT.

Phillips Tells German Companies State Laws Would Be Void.

Representatives of German fire insurance companies and casualty concerns met yesterday afternoon, in the office of State Superintendent of Insurance Jesse S. Phillips, 165 Broadway, and discussed with him action to be taken by the State in the event of the passage of the trading with the enemy bill by Congress. They believed that the bill would practically mean the end of their business. It was contended by the manager or one of the largest companies that the only thing German about his company was that the original captital was furnished by Germans. He said the clerks were Americans and that he was a native American, with no German ancestry.

Mr. Phillips said that in his opinion the State would not be called upon to take any action regarding licenses to do business, as any provision contained in a Federal bill would supercede State laws. If the bill contained a provision vesting in the Secretary of Commerce the right to issue licenses to trade, he thought all State laws on the subject would be void. The State, under these considerations, would be obliged to recognize only the orders of the Secretary of Commerce, or some other duly authorized Federal authority.

The New York State Insurance Office has receive no word regarding the President's proclamation concerning German marine insurance companies and Mr. Phillips telegraphed to Washington asking for an interpretation of certain passages in the proclamation. At none of the offices of the German companies dealing in marine insurance had any official word come from Washington and all the managers know of the proclamation, they said, was what had been published in the newspapers.

DENY EXPORTING COTTON

But Swiss Say Italians Have Furnished Fruits to Germany.

BERNE, July 16.—Regarding American allegations with respect to Swiss exportation of American cotton and Italian fruits to Germany, the Bund publishes a precise statement with the object of showing that Switzerland has exported no cotton since the Autumn of 1915. Control of Switzerland's trade and commerce, then arranged with the Entente, says the paper, has always been strictly observed, rendering such exportation quite impossible.

As to the exportation of Southern fruits to Germany, this traffic was continued, the Bund asserts, to a certain extent with the knowledge and consent of the Italian Government. It explains that there was a kind of compensation traffic between Italy and Germany, despite the war, Italy sending fruits in return for German agricultural machinery. It is pointed out that Switzerland had no right or reason to prevent this traffic, which was conducted for the most part by Italian merchants.

LAWSON LOSES TAX FIGHT.

BOSTON, July 16.—Application by Thomas W. Lawson for an injunction to prevent his arrest for nonpayment of taxes at Winchester was refused by Judge Brown, of the Superior Court, today. A tax warrant on which action is pending is based on a claim against Mr. Lawson for $5,806, alleged to be due the town of Winchester on property owned by him in 1916.

In seeking the injunction, Mr. Lawson said his legal residence was at Scituate and that the property on which the tax was claimed was not, in fact, owned by him.

TO INVESTIGATE ARRESTS.

Woods Would Find Out Why Dying Man Was Unattended.

Police Commissioner Arthur Woods ordered an investigation yesterday of the arrest of Dennis, Maurice, and Etienne Jordan, proprietors of a boarding house, at 270 West Thirty-ninth Street, by Detective Clarence Daly of the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station at 5 o'clock on Saturday morning.

Dennis Jordan asserts that he was blowing his police whistle for help because he had been told that a man had fallen from the roof of an adjoining building and was dying, when Daly came up in plainclothes, ordered him to stop blowing his police whistle, and attacked him for failing to do so. Maurice and Etienne, brothers of Dennis, say that they came out to plead with Daly to attend to the injured man, instead of quarreling with Dennis, and that Daly arrested them also.

Magistrate Frothingham, who heard the case in Jefferson Market Court yesterday, accepted the testimony of Detective Daly to the effect that Dennis Jordan was intoxicated and violent, and that the brothers tried to prevent an arrest. Because of this and the confusion in the testimony of several witnesses for the defense, he fined Dennis Jordan $25 and the other two $5 each.

The part of the case in which Deputy Police Commissioner Dunham, who has charge of the investigation, is particularly interested, is not whether Detective Daly was right or wrong in his quarrel with the Jordans, but why the injured man, Alfred Dubuc, a chauffeur, was allowed to lie unattended on the ground while the detective pursued his grievance against the Jordans. It was not until the quarrel between the detective and the boarding-house proprietors had attracted a policeman in uniform that the injured man received any attention. Dubuc was finally removed to New York Hospital, where he died. It was reported that he might have been benefited if he had received medical attention promptly instead of being neglected during the Daly-Jordan controversy.

Inspector Bolan was ordered yesterday afternoon by Third Deputy Commissioner Dunham to have his report on the incident ready today. The Jordans have engaged Goodman & Pike of 41 Park Row to present their case against the detective.

THREE BILLIONS MORE FOR ALLIES NEEDED

At the Present Rate First Loan Would Be Used Up Entirely by October 25.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Unless the unforeseen develops, Congress will probably be asked before adjournment of the present session to authorize another gigantic loan to the Allies. The present authorization of $3,000,000,000 will be exhausted within from three to four months at the rate at which the Government is lending money to Entente Governments.

Indications are that the amount of the second authorization will be no less than the first, and may go as high as $5,000,000,000.

There is every reason to believe that the Administration's policy of financing the allied Governments for purchases they make in this country will be continued during the period of the war, and that the vast sums to be loaned to them in the future will be loaned as in the past, at the same rate of interest. The American Government will have to pay for the money and on the security of Entente Government bonds to be deposited in the Treasury.

While no official announcement has been made of what the Government intends to do toward continuing to finance the Allies when the present authorized loan of $3,000,000,000 is exhausted, none is likely to be made until after the flotation of the next Liberty loan some time during the Fall. It is pointed out that nearly one-half of the $3,000,000,000 already has been exhausted. The amount of credits placed to foreign Governments already is $1,303,000,000, or approximately 43 per cent. of the total, and this covers the financing of only two months and twenty days.

Total credits to the Allies probably will approximate $1,500,000,000 by July 25, three months after the signing of the War Finance bill, under which authority for the loan was granted to Congress. Should the loans during the next three months be at the same rate as during the last three, the entire $3,000,000,000 will be exhausted by Oct. 25. Without authority of Congress the Government cannot exceed the $3,000,000,000 limit named in the bill, and the next session of Congress will not convene until December.

During the last three months the rate of lending has been approximately $500,000,000 a month. Extended, it would mean an annual loan of $6,000,000,000 abroad, all the funds, of course, being spent in this country for foodstuffs, munitions, and other supplies. Estimated costs to the American Government for its military and naval establishments during the first year of war were placed at approximately $4,000,000,000 soon after the war was declared.

The total of these two items, it is believed, was the figure Secretary McAdoo had in mind when he declared in his recent speeches on behalf of the Liberty Loan that the Government would be called upon to raise $10,000,000,000 during the first year of war.

Present indications are that Congress will remain in session till late in October, and that the War Revenue bill will be among the last of the big measures to be disposed of. It is not unlikely that authorization for the additional loan to the Allies, when sought, will be taken up about the same time, possibly as an amendment to the Revenue bill.

Sues Father-in-Law for $100,000.

Dr. James P. Erskine of 40 East Sixty-second Street, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to recover $100,000 damages from his father-in-law, A. Vedder Brower, a wealthy resident of Utica, for alienating the affections of Mrs. Florence Brower Erskine. The complaint states that Dr. Erskine married the defendant's daughter in September, 1916, and that they lived together at intervals until Feb. 26, when it is alleged that the defendant induced Mrs. Erskine to return to his home and stay there.

Miss Edith Bryce Left $446,385.

KRISTIANIAFJORD IS FILLING.

Liner Pounding Heavily with Water in All Forward Holds.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 16.—The Norwegian-America Line steamship Kristianiafjord, which went ashore near Cape Race in a fog yesterday, was pounding heavily in the surf today, and it was feared that she would become a total loss. She had swung about so that she was parallel with the shore, and all her forward holds were filled with water.

The Kristianiafjord, a ship of 10,000 tons, was bound from New York for a Norwegian port with passengers and freight. She had touched at Halifax, where she was examined by the British authorities.

The passengers, all of whom were landed in safety without much excitement or disorder, arrived here today. Arrangements have been made by the Newfoundland Government for taking care of the entire party. First-class passengers have been sent to hotels and the second-class passengers will remain temporarily on coasting steamers in the harbor. Barracks have been fitted up for the accommodation of the men of the steerage list, while the women of that class are housed at the Grenfell Institute.

The agents of the Norwegian-America Line received messages yesterday from Captain Hiortdanl stating that the liner Kristianiafjord, which was stranded seven miles west of Cape Race, was resting easily and that the weather was calm. Two Canadian Government salvage steamers, one from Halifax and another from Quebec, have gone to the aid of the Kristianiafjord, and should reach her early today. The Captain reported that the forehold was full of water, but the ship was otherwise tight.

Arrangements are being made by the agents of the Norwegian-America Line to have the 906 passengers from the Kristianiafjord who are now in St. John's, N. F., taken to Norway by the Swedish-American liner Stockholm, which has been detained in Halifax harbor by the British Admiralty since February and is to be released today.

The owners of the Kristianiafjord in Christiania have been asked by cable by their New York agents for permission to transfer the passengers to the Stockholm. It has not been decided whether they will embark at St. John's or go to Halifax by train and join the Stockholm there.

ARMS EMPLOYES GET MORE.

Special to The New York Times

NEW HAVEN, July 16.—The Winchester Repeating Arms Company today announced the most sweeping increase in the wages of its employes in its history. A war bonus of at least 10 per cent., or a reduction of hours, decreasing the working day either an hour or an hour and a half, was announced for practically all the employes; in some cases both advances went into effect.

The increase is a sequel, it is reported, of the receipt of the largest war contract ever given the company. It is said to be from the United States Government, and one rumor makes it $100,000,000 for the construction of the Enfield rifle and for ammunition.

It is estimated that the company now employs about 16,000 men, and that about 10,000 more will be added to the force at the plant immediately, largely in the form of a night shift.

Practically every employe of the Winchester plant will be affected by the change in hours or pay. Counting those working at the plant and the homes which they represent, it is not unlikely that one-third of the city's population will be affected either directly or indirectly.

TO SPEND $4,000,000 FOR NITRATE PLANT

Water Power Plan Abandoned on Account of Need to Hasten Work.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Secretary Baker announced today that a plant for the production of nitrates from atmospheric nitrogen would be constructed immediately at a cost of about $4,000,000 and that water power would not be used. Sites have not been selected.

Further discussion by localities desiring to be considered as possible sites is closed temporarily, the announcement says, while the site committee of Cabinet officers is making engineering studies.

It has been assumed ever since the great nitrate project was proposed that a vast supply of waterpower would be needed. Consequently sites with waterpower have been supposed to be the only ones likely to get consideration. Mussel Shoals, of the Tennessee River, was one of the places most strongly advocated in debates in Congress.

Secretary Baker's statement follows:

"By direction of the President, certain plants will be immediately constructed for the production of nitrate from atmospheric nitrogen. The plants to be constructed do not involve the use of water power, but use a process which is a modification of processes previously known; and the total expenditure involved in these projects is about $4,000,000.

"Nothing further can be said at this time about the process or the location of the works which are to be constructed. Of the total amount appropriated by Congress, namely $20,000,000, substantially $16,000,000 remains undesignated as to its expenditure by the President.

"The committee, consisting of the Secretaries of War, Interior, and Agriculture, to which the President referred the question of the selection of a site or sites for the development of water power, has made no report to the President on that subject; but is engaged in the making of further engineering studies; and the subject is temporarily closed to further discussion by localities and communities desiring to be considered as possible sites for the plants."

Informally officials explained that the announcement did not mean that the idea of building a waterpower nitrate plant had been permanently abandoned, although it would not be pressed at present. Several years would be required to build the enormous plant required for the utilization of water power, and for that reason it was determined that for urgent war purposes it would be necessary to adopt one of other processes of producing nitrates.

Ex-Mayor of Colmar Urges Restoration as a Condition of Peace.

WASHINGTON, July 16. — Daniel Blumenthal, former Deputy in the Reichstag from Alsace-Lorraine, Mayor of Colmar, and member of the Senate of Alsace-Lorraine, was received by President Wilson at the White House today. He was accompanied by Ambassador Jusserand.

Mr. Blumenthal, who had a price set upon his head by the German Government after his flight to France the day before the declaration of war, urged upon the President the necessity of making the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France one of the chief conditions for peace.

CONFER ON CHANG'S FATE.

LONDON, July 16.—According to a dispatch to The Daily Mail from Tientsin, diplomats in Peking met secretly to discuss the extraordinary transfer of General Chang Hsun from the Dutch Legation, where he had taken refuge in the course of the fight between Republican and Imperialist troops last Thursday, to the German barracks. Apparently a majority of the diplomats think that Chang Hsun, by refusing mediation and thus causing loss of life, forfeited the rights of ordinary political offenders.

TIENTSIN, July 16.—It is reported that the troops of General Chang Hsun at Suchowfu, Province of Anhwei, who previously had agreed to surrender, have revolted and are completely out of hand. The railway north of Suchowfu is said to have been torn up.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Reconstruction of the Republican Government of China, following the futile attempt to restore the Manchu empire, was reported in dispatches to the Chinese Legation here from Peking today as progressing rapidly. Wang Ta-shih, formerly Secretary of Legation here and Minister to Great Britain and Japan, has assumed the office of Foreign Secretary, and Admiral Liu Kwang-hsung, for three years Minister of the Navy under Tuan Shi-kai, has accepted a similar post with the new Government. Tuan Chi-jui, the Premier, has accepted the added portfolio of Minister of War.

Telegraphic communication with Peking has been restored, the Commercial Cable Company announced yesterday.

IRISH CONVENTION'S HOME.

DUBLIN, July 16.—The National Convention will assemble July 25 in Regent House of Trinity College, according to official announcement. The Chief Secretary for Ireland, H. E. Duke, will preside until the convention chooses its own Chairman.

It is expected that the proceedings will be private, but probably an official record will be made of them.

OPPORTUNITIES IN CHILE.

W. C. Lane Says America Has a Great Trade Field There.

William C. Lane, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, who has just returned from a trip to Chile, where he conferred with leading bankers in Valparaiso and Santiago, is very enthusiastic over the great business opportunities which the republic offers.

"The Germans," said Mr. Lane yesterday, "who formerly carried on most of the business of Chile, are doing practically nothing now, thanks to the war, and the opportunities for the American business man are unlimited. Chile is very prosperous, and has a substantial international trade balance in her favor. The Chileans are keen to increase and extend their business with the rest of the world, but, like all other countries at the present time, they are handicapped by a shortage of ocean transportation facilities. Chileans are so able and up to date in all their methods that they are called 'the Yankees of South America.'

"The republic's two great interests—copper and nitrates—are especially prosperous. Most of the copper and nitrates produced are now used for war purposes. Nitrates enter largely into the manufacture of explosives. The great copper mines in Chile, in which so much American capital is invested, are very large enterprises. Their exportable output, however, is restricted by lack of sea tonnage.

"At present Chile is making a special effort to increase her production of wheat, barley, beans, and cereals in general. She is also extending as rapidly as possible her production of wool, cattle, and hides. The Government realizes that for some years to come the world's needs for food and clothing will be very great, and that any country that has a surplus of raw material for their manufacture can find a ready market for them abroad.

"The Government of Chile is stable, and its finances are in excellent shape. The people are particularly proud of their national credit. In fact, though Chile is highly prosperous today, I believe she will be more so in the future."

PLAN TO WIN IN WALL ST.

F. W. Luttgen Offered It as Evidence of His Sanity.

Frederick William Luttgen, a brother of Walter Luttgen, associated with August Belmont, who has been in the Long Island Home at Amityville for the last few months, appeared before a commission in lunacy and a Sheriff's jury yesterday and asked for his release on the ground that he is sane. He testified that he had perfected a sure system to win money in Wall Street, and offered to demonstrate it for the jury, but was not permitted to do so. The testimony showed that Luttgen, who is 74 years old, has property worth only $5,000, but he explained that he would support himself by selling lots in New Jersey and speculating in Wall Street on the money thus obtained.

Evidence to the effect that Luttgen wrote many letters to his brother and August Belmont, to which they took exception, was introduced, and the jury was notified that if the alleged incompetent should be adjudged sane, criminal proceedings would be taken against him because of the letters. A previous hearing resulted in a verdict that he was sane, but the court set it aside.

Supplying The World

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Price movements in yesterday's stock market were conflicting and puzzling. The industrial list was generally weak, being conspicuously so in the forenoon, while the railroads were advancing. In the afternoon there developed a scarcity of call money, but in the face of advancing rates the market turned stronger and a good part of the declines was wiped out. The close was irregular, with losses running up to 4 points in the industrials and losses and gains alternating in the railroad list.

Traders hardly knew how to interpret the ticker's comment on the German situation. There was, of course, a fresh crop of developments on which to base the hope that the desire for peace is rapidly gaining headway in Germany. Had the market been dominated by this view, however, it would have been natural to expect a sharp rise in both Liberty bonds and the Anglo-French issue. Another view of the situation was that the industrials were responding more to fear of reduced profits under Government control than to any expectation that the war is nearing its end. The fact that the railroads, which would certainly lose tonnage if peace brought about reduced activity among industrial plants, were strong, supported the latter view, since no one in authority has suggested imposition of new taxes upon transportation earnings.

The advance in call money rates resulted directly from the withdrawals of further large sums which the Federal Government has had on deposit with the banks since receiving proceeds of the first two payments on the 3½ per cent. loan. An issue of $200,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness falls due today, and it was estimated that about $75,000,000 was taken yesterday to supplement last week's withdrawals for the purpose of meeting these certificates. Approximately half of the certificates falling due today have been turned in as part payment for the Liberty bonds. Call money opened at 6 per cent. and went as high as 10 per cent. The ruling rate was 6 per cent. on most loans, but a considerable volume of money was put out at 8 per cent. in the early afternoon. Yesterday's top rate was the highest seen since early last December. A third installment, amounting to 20 per cent., is due on the Government bond subscription on July 30. Bankers look for a fluctuating market for money for the next fortnight, though the market does not seem likely to remain long above 6 per cent.

The recent advance in money has started afresh discussion of the reported plan of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue the remainder of the war loan at 3½ per cent. It is a question if bankers who thought a few days ago that $3,000,000,000 carrying this rate could be sold at the end of September would recommend a second offering on the 3½ per cent. basis if money does not soon become much easier. The rise also aroused speculation as to the probability of Great Britain resuming the gold movement. In the past each period of high money has brought about the release of large sums of gold for its effect upon this money market.

Steel common fell to 110¾ yesterday and closed at 120½, with a net decline of 2%. Superior Steel, Pressed Steel Car, and Sloss-Sheffield each lost 2 points; Crucible, 2¼; Bethlehem, 4, and Bethlehem B, 2¾. Industrial Alcohol broke from 114, its best price for the session, to 153¾, closing off 3¾. Savage Arms declined 6¾ and Barrett Company 4⅞. The copper stocks lost from 1 to 3 points. The rails were little more active in spite of the greater favor with which they were regarded.

LONDON RATES QUIET.

Money in Increased Supply—American Shares Higher.

LONDON, July 16.—Money was in increased supply today through dividend disbursements. Discount rates were quiet.

The stock market started the week with a good undertone. Most of the business was in the specialties, while Russian issues were favored by the war news. Brazilian bonds were 1 to 2 points higher on the resumption of cash payments. The accumulation of week-end orders was small, but gilt-edged securities and oil, industrial, and rubber shares were well maintained. Americans were higher in sympathy with New York, but business was meagre.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Gold in Banks' Vaults.

One of the main objects of the passage of the recent amendments to the Federal Reserve act, which have reduced reserve requirements, was the concentration of gold holdings of the member banks in the vaults of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks, where the metal can do the most good for the country at large. Since the enactment of the legislation practically all of the leading New York national banks have turned over to the New York Reserve Bank a considerable portion of their supply of gold coin and gold certificates. One institution, however, has not followed this general policy, and still holds in its own vaults over $10,000,000 of gold. This amount is unusually large when it is considered that banks of much larger capitalization and much larger deposits are maintaining gold reserves of only from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000. Under the new law, gold in the vaults of member banks does not count as legal reserve.

Anxious for Treasury Statements.

Bankers expressed annoyance yesterday over the failure of the Treasury Department to issue its daily statement since June 29. They called attention to the fact that under the law, daily publication was mandatory, and pointed out that, just at this moment when there was so much activity in the money markets of the country and Government finances were playing such an important part in current transactions, it was vitally important that the public—especially the banks—should have official data regarding receipts and disbursements of money that appeared on the daily sheet. It was suggested that if the Treasury had yet been unable to compile totals for June 30, and for the fiscal year ended on that date, there was no reason why the department should not make public the daily figures for the last fourteen business days.

Silver Goes Higher.

The price of bar silver which advanced last week to 80¾ cents per ounce, but dropped to 79¾ on Saturday, moved yesterday up to 81⅛. In London quotations were up ¼ to 41¼ pence, the same being the highest price paid since 1892, when 43⅝ pence was charged. The local price is the highest since 1892.

To Confer on Liberty Loan.

The Governors of the Federal Reserve Banks of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, and Chicago will meet today at the offices of the New York bank to discuss the "mechanics" of handling future Government loans. Each of the out-of-town Governors will be accompanied by representatives of the bond issuing and distributing divisions of their banks. It was said yesterday that the conference would not consider matters relating to the interest rate or date of offering of the second issue of Liberty bonds, but that it would confine itself to an exchange of ideas regarding the best methods of handling subscriptions and the organization of clerical forces for that purpose.

Puts More Popular.

Those traders who feel that they have lost their sense of forthcoming market movements have been trying to hit them blindly, in some instances, by purchasing puts and calls. A speculation of this kind involves no more loss than the price paid for the privilege. New Street dealers in "papers" yesterday reported a brisk demand for puts. An experienced tape reader said that he could not make up his own mind as to whether stocks were a purchase or s

CALL MONEY AT 10% HIGHEST THIS YEAR

MOST LOANS MADE AT 6%

Advance Is Regarded as Warning Against Excessive Stock Market Activity.

The rate for call money advanced yesterday to 10 per cent., the highest level reached this year, but most Stock Exchange loans were made at 6 per cent., which was the opening, closing, and renewal rate. The sudden rise in call newal rates. Some transactions were put through at 7 and 8 per cent. The sudden rise in call money rates was attributed to the relatively poor showing made by Saturday's bank statement and to the further withdrawal of Government funds from depositary banks. The rally had the effect of centring attention in money market conditions, which have commanded comparatively little notice of late because of the lack of any disturbance accompanying the recent Liberty Loan payments, a period during which rates did not go above 6 per cent. Incidentally, the advance was regarded as a warning against excessive stock market activity, many bankers being of the opinion that stock speculation should be curbed during war times.

The jump in call money rates induced a number of institutions to apply for rediscounts and short-time advances at the Federal Reserve Bank, and it was estimated that the Federal Bank had placed approximately $50,000,000 to the credit of member banks which sought accommodations. The rate charged for loans for maturities of less than 15 days is 3 per cent.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which is acting as fiscal agent for the Government, has no authority to make public the figures showing the withdrawal of Government funds, but from bankers it was gathered that besides the $103,000,000 taken out of the banks last week, which brought the total Government deposits with Clearing House banks down to $158,000,000, there was withdrawn on Saturday and yesterday at least $50,000,000 more.

Today there becomes due $300,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indectedness, bearing 3 per cent. interest, which were sold to the banks on May 10 last. Arrangements have been made for the payment of the certificates at the office of the Reserve Bank. Of the total issue of $200,000,000 about $100,000,000 was purchased by banks and trust companies in the New York district, and it is estimated that approximately $50,000,000 of them have been turned in in payment of Liberty Loan bonds, and therefore it is figured that only about $50,000,000 will be presented for redemption today.

Saturday's bank statement showed excess reserves of only $36,000,000 and aggregate reserve of $538,000,000, the lowest figures reported since the establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks. The decrease in aggregate reserves for the week was $230,000,000, but if there had been added the $110,000,000 of vault cash of Reserve Bank members (an item omitted from the calculation under the new system of accounting) the decrease in aggregate reserves would have been only $120,000,000. The falling off in reserves has been due primarily to the withdrawal of funds by the Government. The New York banks have been obliged to accommodate their correspondent banks in addition to turning over the money called for by the Government from their own institutions. It is estimated that from 50 to 60 per cent. of the total funds deposited for the account of the Liberty Loan have been withdrawn to date.

Bankers are expecting daily to hear of another offering of certificates of indebtedness. The $300,000,000 issues of May 25 and June 8, both of which mature on July 30—the same day when a 20 per cent. Liberty Loan installment is due—were put out at 3¼ per cent. In banking circles it is believed that the next issue may have to be offered at 3½ instead of 3¼ per cent.

COAL TRAFFIC GROWS.

Lehigh Valley Reports Record Shipments of Domestic Sizes.

For the railroads handling coal in the anthracite region, last month's business was a record breaker. The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company announced yesterday that it handled in June 1,347,205 tons, or 18.74 per cent. of the total. This was nearly 350,000 tons more than was handled by the road in June a year ago.

"While this is most gratifying to us," said President E. E. Loomis, "the thing that appeals to me is the fact that for the six months ending June 30 the Lehigh Valley carried a total of 4,297,923 tons of the larger or domestic sizes of coal—the sizes householders use. This is nearly half a million tons more of domestic coal than was carried by our nearest competitor.

"In view of the demand of the people for coal I think we can point to our showing with pride. It indicates that every man who has anything to do with the handling of coal from the mine to the market is on the job."

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. and associates have purchased and will offer shortly $400,000 St. Clair County, Ill., road 5 per cent. bonds, due serially 1918 to 1937.

A special meeting of the Springfield Body Corporation will be held July 27 to vote on a proposal to increase the capital stock to $3,230,000, of which $750,000 is to be 8 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock, $1,000,000 8 per cent. cumulative second preferred stock, and $1,500,000 common stock. All the Directors of the company have resigned and a new board has been elected, including H. S. Tenney, C. A. MacDonald, E. W. Wagner, Harry Bill, and G. H. Woods.

COTTON PRICES FALL ALMOST $4 A BALE

RECOVERY IN PART FOLLOWS

Active Covering Brings Rally of About 30 to 37 Points, but Net Decline for Day Is 37 to 71.

Indications that the Texas drought had been broken offset all other considerations in the cotton market yesterday and caused a sharp decline in prices, which at one time amounted to about 78 points or nearly $4 a bale from Saturday's closing quotations. While there was some dispute regarding the extent of the rainfall, some asserting that it did not reach the central and southern parts of the State where it was most needed, there were indications in the barometer lines which gave local map readers reason to believe that the whole State would be visited by good rains within the next twenty-four hours. This view seemed to be generally accepted by the trade, and on every rally there was good selling, especially in the late afternoon, when New Orleans showed considerable weakness and was an important seller in the market.

The one notable change from the downward trend of prices occurred in the early afternoon, when a Washington dispatch was received stating that cotton would not be included in the compromise Food Control bill. Active covering for a time rallied prices about 30 to 37 points from the lowest of the day, but the upturn only served to bring out an increased volume of selling which caused most of the advance to be lost before the close, which was steady at a net decline of 37 to 71 points.

The opening was easy and 35 to 52 points lower on all positions, but July, which opened unchanged and acted relatively firm throughout the day, at one time selling 180 points over October against about 5 points premium on the first July notice day. Last November there was a premium of 205 points, and some thought that this might be exceeded even before the present month was out. The situation seems to be, according to local belief, that Japanese interests, finding themselves unable, by reason of freight congestion, to deliver cotton here on July contracts, had been obliged to cover, as the local stock is very small. Peace rumors came to the front again, but as a local sentiment, especially in the forenoon, was rather pessimistic over the political situation abroad.

An interesting feature of the day's news was a jump in exports to 49,024 bales, including 25,503 from Savannah to France, the balance being from New York to Great Britain, France, and the Continent.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat market was again very inactive, and prices for contracts were irregular, closing net unchanged to 1½c higher. The cash position was irregular, although leading markets were generally firmer. Minneapolis advancing 5 cents, while Kansas City was unchanged to 2 cents higher. The visible supply in the United States decreased 2,633,000 for the week, compared with a decrease of 1,572,000 the previous week and a decrease of 2,287,000 last year. Farmers are not selling wheat freely and it seems to be the consensus of opinion that they believe $2 is a fair price on the farms. In the local cash market No. 2 hard Winter wheat was quoted at $2.35, free on board New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The decline in corn and prospects of clearing weather caused active selling in the oats market, and prices declined from an early advance, closing ½@1c net lower. The visible decreased 624,000, compared with a decrease of 910,000 last week and a decrease of 583,000 last year. The local cash market was quiet, with standard quoted at 81@81½c; No. 2 white, 82c; No. 3 white, 80¼@81c; No. 4 white, 80@80¼c; fancy clipped white, 81½@84c; ordinary clipped white, 80@81c.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was comparatively quiet and prices were easier under scattered selling, despite peace rumors. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 39,000; estimated for Tuesday, 15,000; Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 3,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil showed a very nervous undertone, and prices were easier, closing 5 to 20 points net lower. Total sales were 14,400 barrels. The action of the cotton and lard markets had a depressing influence, and sentiment was also affected more or less by the apparent nervousness in all the markets over the political situation in Europe. COFFEE.

Weakness was a feature in the early part of the session, when traders, disappointed over the outlook for peace, sold coffee liberally, and first prices dropped 16@17 points, easing off later 16 to 17 points under the close of Saturday. The local spot market was ⅛c higher, with Rio No. 7s quoted at 9¾c and Santos 4s at 10¼c. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The sugar futures market opened firm, 2 to 10 points higher. Trading was quite active, with local trade interests seeming to dominate the market, taking both the buying and selling side. There was considerable switching by Wall Street interests from September to November at 3 and 4 points premium. Values held within a narrow range, the close being 2 to 10 points net higher, with sales of 27,000 tons. Range of prices:

It was very quiet in raw sugar, with only a moderate buying interest shown by local refiners. The American bought 3,000 tons St. Croix sugars, second half August-September shipment, at 6.39c. cost, insurance, and freight, and local refiners bought 10,000 bags Cubas, out of store, at 6.52c. Prompt Cubas could be sold at 5½c. cost and freight, but holders were not openly offering that position. Cubas were available for August-September shipment at 5½c. cost and freight, but the offerings were not taken. It is estimated that there yet remains less than 800,000 tons of the Cuban crop made and to be made yet unsold. Spot prices follow: Centrifugal, 6.52c.; molasses, 5.44c.; cost and freight, 6¼c. There was a fair inquiry for refined sugar, prompted by the warm weather, and prices were firmly held at 7.50@8c for fine granulated.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKETS.

BUTTER—Receipts yesterday, 8,237 packages. There was a weaker and unsettled market for most grades of creamery. Occasional purchases for storage were made, but the general demand was light and the offerings quite large. Renovated slightly favored the buyer, but ladles and packing stock held up reasonably well. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 10,255 cases. Arrivals were comparatively light. The proportion of fine to fancy qualities was small, and only generally firm. Western advices to holders asked better prices for the higher grades. Some improvement has been established, but the market is irregular. Earnings Net profits of Company and its proportion of the profits of subsidiary companies, according to report of Price, Waterhouse & Company, after providing adequate reserves for depreciation, but before charging interest, were as follows:

		1913	262,138.78

Earnings of 1913 and 1914 were adversely affected to an extent estimated at $500,000 by the great Ohio flood of April, 1913. The above earnings reflect no revenue whatever from the new steel plant under construction at an estimated cost of $14,500,000. After completion of this new plant the Company will have a capacity of 500,000 tons per annum in finished steel, and a conservative estimate of the earnings available for the protection of these notes is as follows:

Net earnings before charging interest	$4,000,000
Annual reserve necessary to retire both principal and interest of the First Mortgage bonds	335,077
Balance available for the protection of these notes	$3,664,923
Annual interest charges on these notes	360,000

This estimate is made without regard to the high prices for steel and steel products now obtaining and likely to continue for some time, but is based on normal prices.

The business of the Mark Manufacturing Company was established in 1888. The original capital invested was $5,000. In 1901 $50,000 additional capital was added. Of the Company's assets on June 1, 1917, more than $7,500,000 were entirely accumulated from earnings. The Company's output includes ste

MAY NOT REQUIRE TRANSFER RULING

Intimation That Companies May Drop Demands with More Settled Business Conditions.

EXPECT LOWER PRICES

Public Service Board Grants Long Adjournment of Third Avenue Company's Hearings.

Further hearings on the application of the Third Avenue Railway Company for permission to charge 2 cents for transfers, were postponed yesterday by the Public Service Commission until Sept. 10. The postponement was at the request of the company's counsel. Therefore no more hearings upon any of the applications for permission to charge for transfers will be had until September, and they will not be concluded until the end of that month or early in October.

While no suggestion was made by the commission that the companies might decide to withdraw their application, it was said that industrial and business conditions probably would take a more definite form by October, and the cost of materials be established on a lower basis. If this should occur, it was said, the need of increased revenues through increased fares might cease. In the meantime passengers will not have to pay a larger fare.

The application of the New York and North Shore Traction Company for permission to charge a 7-cent fare was taken up yesterday by the commission, and all of the testimony in behalf of the company was presented within three hours. This delighted the commission. It was said to indicate plainly the progress which might be made by conforming with the request of the commission for certain statistical data. This line operates cars from Whitestone, Flushing, Little Neck and intermediate points in Queens to various points in Nassau County.

The closing of this company's side of the controversy led to the suggestion that this case might be used to test the question concerning the jurisdiction of the commission. Ernest E. Baldwin, representing the city in opposition to the application, asked that the application be dismissed. If the commission did not care to dismiss it, he thought the questions of law involved might be determined in advance of the hearings on the pending applications of the Third Avenue Railway Company, the New York Railways Company, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, and the others.

William L. Ransom, counsel for the commission, said that if the city cared to submit the question of the commission's jurisdiction to the court it might well be based on the New York and North Shore Traction Company's application, which was now up to the commission to grant or refuse. Concerning the power of the commission Mr. Ransom said:

"I think I have a reasonably clear, personal conclusion as to what our New York courts will hold on this question, and that is that the Legislature has vested the commission with the power to increase the fare of this company to 6 or 7 cents within the city limits, if the facts are shown to require such an increase, in order to permit the company to maintain its property, furnish adequate service, and earn a fair return on its very moderately valued property.

"This, of course, is not the question involved in the transfer cases, but I think the commission has the power to grant this company an increase in its fares, if the facts require it. The case will be compactly and expeditiously presented; it may be a very good one in which to get the legal question settled, if the city or any one doubts the commission's power to act, providing the facts show need for action."

Whether the courts will be asked to decide the scope of the commission's jurisdiction on this case, in which a flat increase of fare is asked, or wait until another case, involving a request for permission to charge for transfers, is in proper shape, was not decided. The data submitted by the New York and North Shore Company was referred to the commission's statistical department, which will report to the commission on July 25.

The application of the Staten Island company, which wants permission to charge a 6-cent fare, also went over until Sept. 10, after William Wirt Mills, Vice President of the Staten Island Civic League had asked that the application be dismissed on the ground that the company had not obeyed the orders of the commission. Argument on the matter will be heard when the application comes before the commission.

FIGHT INSURANCE TAX.

Henry Evans, President of the Continental, Fidelity-Phenix, and American Eagle Fire Insurance Companies, has written a letter to President Wilson criticising the proposed revenue bill. He takes particular exception to the provision calling for the imposition of a 15 per cent. tax on net earnings of insurance corporations. Mr. Evans says:

"As applied to fire insurance companies this legislation will create so unsound a business condition as to affect the stability of fire insurance companies throughout the country. No fire insurance company can conduct its business with proper regard either for the interest of its stockholders or its policy holders, except upon the principle of accumulating net income during the periods when it is able to secure a profit in order that the funds so accumulated may be distributable to policy holders during periods when it is called upon to respond to losses in excess of its income.

"Any fire insurance company conducting its business upon a basis of distributing its entire net earnings to stockholders is doomed to failure and its policy holders are certain to find that the policies do not provide the safe indemnity which property owners are entitled to. A bill which recognizes the propriety of allowing banks to accumulate 20 per cent. of their net income should, in the interest of the people of this country, if not in the interest of the corporations themselves, allow equal or greater consideration to insurance companies."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

More than 75,000 shares of United States Steel common were dealt in on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. At the start of the day the market displayed an improving tendency, but the higher prices appeared to invite selling in volume, which quickly took the bullish edge off and in the later dealings prices gave way with severe losses recorded in many of the industrial specialties.

Dress Goods Jobbers Mark Time.

With the Spring, 1918, opening of leading lines of corporation dress goods looked for in the next few days at prices which, it is said, will make all previous ones look low, local jobbers are not trying very hard to do business at the moment. Some wholesalers are understood to own goods bought at the last opening figures, and, with these fabrics about to be increased automatically in value by the new mill prices, they are especially choice of them. One of the big concerns is understood to have priced some of its merchandise for September shipment at prices lower than later delivery goods will be sold for, but even these quotations are said to be well above current figures in the primary market.

Canners to Do Their Bit.

Apropos of the food economy movement that is being sponsored by the men in high places, the National Canners' Association calls on its members to do their bit in helping the good work along. Among other things, it advises the members to fill every can full of food, pointing out that the can supply ward, and that the law requires it, and the national emergency demands it. It is also shown that, as a large portion of the ration of the army and navy is canned food, on the integrity of the canning industry is dependent to no small extent the honor and safety of the country. In view of this, the opinion is expressed that the loyalty of the American canner will not be measured in terms of low commerce and trade. Capacity loading is also advocated by the association as a means of helping reduce the car shortage.

Red Cross Nurse Handkerchiefs.

Burlap Prices Very Firm.

Burlaps opened firmly in this market yesterday, the feature, so far as selling was concerned, being the disposal of a good-sized quantity of spot 10½-ounce 40-inch goods at something over 13.50 cents. Prices on eight-ounce goods were quoted on the basis of 11.10 cents for reload lots, and 10.25 cents or less than that quantity. The scarcity of goods hampered the sale of lightweights. Some idea of the demand there has been for both spot and afloat goods of late can be gauged from the fact that, while several big cargoes from Calcutta have come in in the last three weeks or so, not a yard of the goods brought in is on the market. No improvement in the situation at Calcutta is reported, and reports from Dundee, if anything, are more bullish than usual.

A Growing Form of "Graft."

Time was when the ambitious young man or woman who wanted a job in this city armed himself or herself with a wad of recommendations from the family minister and set out to triumph over the trials and perils of a great city. Or, at least, they did it that way in books. Now, however, they have apparently found a more effective way, and one which is causing more than one manufacturer or wholesaler in this city to scratch his head and ponder over a new form of "graft." The scheme now is for some here armed with letters from the largest buyers the home town or city affords, the latter generally being willing to write them in the hope of capturing the family trade. Then it is up to the victim in this city to decide whether he wants to employ some one he doesn't need or run the risk of losing an account. It is said that quite a few garment models are getting their jobs in this way.

Gray Goods Sales Very Light.

Very little business was put through in the local gray goods market yesterday. Even inquiries were few, and in most cases they brought no response from sellers. The latter are well covered for some time to come, and care too little about booking additional business at the moment to grant concessions to stimulate the demand. Second hand offerings were said to be fewer than has been the case lately, and mostly for contract deliveries. Printcloth sales were both limited and uninteresting. About the only thing that stood out in the coarse goods end was a sale of spot 40-inch 4.25-yard sheetings at 11 cents. Closing mill printcloth prices were nominally firm at these levels:

39-inch, 68-72s	12c	38½-inch, 60-56s	9½c
38½-inch, 64-64s	11c	27-inch, 64-60s	7¼c

Duty on Lace Ornamentation.

Collector Malone decided yesterday that judicial proceedings would have to determine the classification under the tariff of doilies and pillowcases of recent construction ornamented with both antique lace over 100 years old and modern lace. The Collector held that the merchandise was properly dutiable at 60 per cent. under the provision for "articles of lace," while the importer claimed free entry accrued as "artistic antiques over 100 years old." The importer's contention, which was novel to the customs men, was that the presence of the antique lace had the effect of putting the articles in the free list.

They Are Taking Evening Gowns.

If there is any intention on the part of the wealthier women of the country to economize on clothes this Fall to the extent of "going easy" on evening gowns, it is not to be seen in the purchases that are now being made in this city by buyers for many of the country's leading stores. The straight, long line prevails in models now being shown here by well-known manufacturers. They are slightly longer than the gowns of recent seasons, the skirts are narrower, and some of them incorporate trains. Normal waist line effects are favored. Much metal lace drapery is seen, and panels of metal lace are also used. Net overdrapes are frequent, one attractive model showing no less than three layers of this material, all in different, yet harmonizing, shades. The bodices for the most part are cut quite low in the front and very much so in the back.

Sets a Stage for His Gowns.

One of the well-known local manufacturers of high class dresses has adopted a stage lighting device that he has found very useful in selling his evening gowns. It consists of a so-called shadow box, in which are several high powered incandescent lights. This box is placed just inside and above the swing doors leading to the models' room. Behind these doors has been arranged a three-sided velvet curtain of a Pompadour rose shade. As the model comes through an opening in the rear curtain, which is immediately closed, she pauses for a moment under the full glare of the lights. The mirrored doors are swung back as she enters the "stage," and the effect of the picture is heightened by the reflections. When the model has completed her pose the doors are shut and she advances into the showroom. The object of the performance is to give the buyer an idea of just how the gown will look in actual use at night. When the model comes into the showroom the natural light makes the "day values" of the colors apparent.

BAFF PROSECUTION RESTS.

Defense Moves for Dismissal of the Indictments.

The cross-examination of Moses Rosenstein, known also as "Chicken Joe," was continued yesterday at the trial before Supreme Court Justice Tompkins of Joseph and Jacob Cohen, Abraham Graff, and Davis Jacobs, jointly indicted on a charge of complicity in the murder of Barnet Baff, the West Washington Market poultry dealer.

Rosenstein, who was indicted with the four men, but who turned State's evidence just before the trial started, denied that he had formulated his answers while on the stand with a view of contradicting statements implicating him made by Archielio, who was convicted as the actual slayer of Baff. The witness said that he had engaged an attorney to defend him before he finally decided to plead and become a witness for the prosecution.

"Did you ever tell any one that Baff's son, Harry, had offered you $5,000 to come across and that your bail checks would be fixed, up by him?" asked Frank Moss, of counsel for the defendants.

"No such luck," Rosenstein replied.

Assistant District Attorney William Harmon Black was also a witness, and he told of his trip to Italy to bring back Antonio Cardinale, alleged to have hired the gunmen. George Levin, who was employed by Baff, was called to testify to a conversation Baff had over the telephone a few minutes before he was killed. Levin said that he answered the telephone and the person who asked for his employer spoke very good English.

The prosecution rested late in the afternoon and Frank Moss moved for a dismissal of the indictments on the ground that the evidence submitted by the State lacked the corroboration the law required when all of the witnesses were accomplices. The motion was made separately on behalf of each defendant. Justice Tompkins denied the motion on behalf of David Jacobs and Joseph Cohen, and announced that he would reserve decision as affecting Joseph Cohen and David Graff. The trial will be continued today.

Need Girls for Honor Guard.

A recruiting station for women has been opened by the Girls' National Honor Guard, Miss Theodora Booth, President; Mrs. J. Bishop Venderver, State Manager, 1,465 Broadway. "The Honor Guard Girls stand behind the men who do the fighting," says the call for recruits. "Girls of New York and Brooklyn, now is your chance to see what you can do." Every Wednesday and Saturday a uniformed squad of girls, detailed for the purpose, goes in an automobile to the Sailors' Hospital in Brooklyn to take fruit and flowers to the men there. There are now 20,000 members of the Guard in different States, all of whom do what they can to aid the soldiers or sailors nearest them.

GERMAN MUST MEET SUIT.

Tuckerton Wireless Superintendent, Interned, to Answer in Court.

A queer situation developed yesterday in the course of a hearing before Judge Haight, in the Newark branch of the Federal Court, of an infringement suit brought by receivers for the National Electric Signalling Company against the Hoch Frequenz Maschinen Aktien Gesellschaft für Drahtlose Telegraphie, which concern built the radio station at Tuckerton, N. J., for the last year and a half in the hands of the Government.

It developed that the only person connected with the defendant company, which has its legal domicile in Germany, upon whom service was had, was Emil E. Meyer, who was its Superintendent at Tuckerton up to the time that the Government sent a naval Lieutenant and two wireless operators to the station to take charge. When the war with Germany began Meyer was arrested as an alien enemy and sent to Ellis Island, and subsequently sent to Gloucester City, where he is being held incommunicado.

It was urged by L. A. Steinhardt of the law firm of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, counsel for the German company, that the process served on Meyer had no validity, for the reason that with the outbreak of the war his agency automatically ceased. Mr. Steinhardt contended further that as a prisoner of war Meyer could not be communicated with, and that, moreover, it would be criminal for him to attempt to communicate with the German company.

Another point raised by Mr. Steinhardt was that if there was any infringement at all it was being committed by the Government, in that the scout cruisers Salem and Birmingham are fitted with the apparatus which the complainants charge the German company is infringing. This, he said, was a matter of record in the New York courts, where other litigation was started and held up on account of the war.

Judge Haight ruled the service of process upon Meyer to have been good and signed an order extending the time for the defense to answer to Sept. 16. "Assuming that the rights of American citizens have been infringed upon," he said, "are we going to let the German Empire, which has driven us into war, stand in the way of remedial measures?"

Denies Citizenship to 16 Germans.

DALLAS, Texas, July 16.—Because of the German law which permits German citizens to become naturalized citizens of other countries without forfeiting their German citizenship, Federal Judge G. W. Jack today denied citizenship papers to sixteen Germans who had filed applications before the outbreak of war between the United States and Germany.

Goods for England Burned.

COPENHAGEN, July 16.—A dispatch from Trondhjem, Norway, says that a mysterious fire has occurred there in a storage warehouse containing goods ready for shipment to Great Britain. The damage is estimated at many millions of crowns.

The Ideal Vacation

2,000 MILES 8 DAYS ON THE WATER $44.10 ALL EXPENSES INCLUDED ON STEAMERS

ITINERARY

FIRST DAY—At sea—on a large ocean steamer affording highest standard of cuisine and service; spacious decks for rest or recreation; elegantly appointed lounging rooms, music rooms, smoking room, dining saloon, etc., for social pastime, bracing sea air and a cordial gathering of compagnons de voyage all seeking "good fellowship" and utmost enjoyment of the trip.

SECOND DAY—Six hundred and twenty-seven miles south of New York, steamer passes between Fort Moultre and Fort Sumter of Civil War fame, and arrives at Charleston, S. C., ample time being allowed for a shore visit at this historic and peculiarly interesting city of the South, with its Battery Esplanade, including celebrated homes of old southern aristocracy, the old Cathedrals, the Charleston Navy Yard and numerous other attractions.

THIRD DAY—Eight hundred and twenty-four miles south of New York, or 197 miles south of Charleston, brings you to Jacksonville, Fla., the great metropolis and gateway to the enchanted land of Ponce de Leon, and at 4.00 p. m. same afternoon you embark on a most unique and fascinating "Daylight and Searchlight" trip

ON THE BEAUTIFUL St. Johns "The American Nile"

FOURTH DAY—Three hundred and forty miles of picturesque and luxuriant scenery—the most enchanting and interesting inland water trip in America—with glimpses of alligators, tropical birds of beautiful plumage, marvelous water foliage, dense forests with overhanging Spanish moss, open lowlands, pretty orange groves, fishing camps and permanent riverside settlements.

FIFTH DAY—Arriving back in Jacksonville at 7 a. m.; the forenoon may be devoted, at your own convenience, to visiting the Ostrich Farm, curio and souvenir shops, sightseeing trips, or trolley rides through the beautiful suburbs. For the return trip north the ocean steamer sails from Jacksonville at 2.00 p. m.

SIXTH, SEVENTH and EIGHTH DAYS—Eight hundred and twenty-four miles, or three days, ocean voyage northward from Jacksonville, and the 2,000 mile tour is completed with your arrival at New York on the afternoon of the eighth day.

EXPENSES

$44.10 includes transportation, meals and accommodations on the ocean and river steamers in both directions. The only extra expense to the passenger being luncheon on the third day, also breakfast and luncheon on the fifth day, between arrival and departure of steamers at Jacksonville, excepting, that in the event of any unexpected delay to steamers from causes beyond control of the Steamship Company, all shore expenses while awaiting further transportation will be born by the passenger.

STOP-OVERS AND SIDE TRIPS

Although the above tour is arranged to cover 8 days and without stopping over at any point passengers may—at their own expense—extend the trip to permit stop-over of four or seven days at Jacksonville, affording opportunity for side-trips to quaint old St. Augustine. In no case, however, will tickets be extended to more than a final limit of fifteen days from original date of sale.

THE REAL ESTAE FIELD.

Through the filing of plans yesterday for the remodelling of the old building at 1,567 and 1,569 Broadway, southwest corner of Forty-seventh Street, the fact was disclosed that J. J. and Lee Shubert have obtained a long term lease on that and adjoining property for a new Broadway theatre. The property acquired for the purposes includes, besides the immediate corner parcel, owned by Ella A. Gray, the two adjoining five-story buildings at 214 to 220 West Forty-seventh Street, in the same ownership, and the structure at 222, owned by Mary M. Ray. The entire property has a frontage on Broadway of 48.2 feet and 241 on Forty-seventh Street. It has been taken on a twenty-one years' lease with renewals, E. Margolies being the broker in the negotiations. The annual rental will be about $70,000.

The alteration plans, as filed by the architect, Herbert J. Knapp, estimated the cost at $50,000 for the corner structure. It was stated, however, that the new theatre will cost about $200,000. It will have accommodations for 900 persons, and will be ready for opening in the Fall. The Forty-seventh Street property abuts the Globe Theatre.

New Owner for Maiden Lane Building.

The Eighty-three Maiden Lane Corporation has been formed to take over the ownership of the five-story building at that number, 25.8 by 90.8, just west of Gold Street. The new company is capitalized at $32,500, with E. G. Partridge, J. S. Higham, and H. C. Lakin as Directors. Title to the property is held by Wolcott C. Lane and others, heirs of the late Elizabeth D. Lane, who acquired it in 1905.

Bus Company Takes Title.

Title was recorded yesterday to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company from the Consolidated Gas Company to the middle portion of the block bounded by Broadway, Riverside Drive, 132d and 133d Street, the parcel fronting 400 feet on 132d Street and 423 on 133d Street, 100 feet west of Broadway. The new owners gave back a mortgage of $175,000. The property will be used for a large garage and other buildings, rendered necessary from the uptown extension of the omnibus service.

Recent Buyers.

Thomas E. Wynne was the buyer of the four-story dwelling at 741 Madison Avenue, 16.8 by 80, between Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth Streets, sold by Miss Nathalie P. Stewart.

Emery L. Ferris was the buyer of the building at 17 East Thirty-sixth Street, sold recently by Miss Laura Hoe. It was held at $100,000.

Sixty lots of the Sturges estate holdings in the Bronx were sold on the premises on Saturday by Bryan L. Kennelly for a total of $162,550, averaging about $2,710 a lot. Nearly 900 persons attended the sale. The offering of the corner of 174th Street and Vyse Avenue produced some spirited bidding. The four lots, 100 by 100, with a lot 25 by 100 adjoining on Vyse Avenue, were bought by the Brandt Bros. Building Company for $20,050. The opposite corner of 174th Street and Vyse Avenue, 100 by 100, was bought by Mrs. Julia Fitzgerald for $17,000, and she also purchased four lots at the corner of Bryant Avenue and 174th Street for $13,550. Single lots on Vyse Avenue brought about $2,250 each. The northwest corner of 174th Street and Bryant Avenue brought $13,400. Single lots on Bryant Avenue brought $2,100.

The remaining 139 lots will be sold by Mr. Kennelly on Thursday in the Vesey Street salesroom.

Bronx Sales.

A plot of thirty-five lots in the Spuyten Duyvil section, fronting on Johnson or Palisade Avenue and over 350 feet on Independence Avenue has been sold by the estate of Harriet W. Kellogg to a client of John Jay McKelvey. Joseph F. Day acted as broker for the selling interests.

The four-story flat at 773 Elsmere Place on plot 25 by 120 has been sold by Joseph A. Wasserman for Albert M. Barker to an investor.

The two-story frame house at 2,457 Hoffman Street, 16.8 by 97.0, between 188th and 189th Street, was purchased by Philip A. Johann from Edward Squitznagle.

Buys L. I. City Factory Site.

The Tock Pressed Machine Screw Company has bought through George J. Ryan a plot 75 by 100 on the north side of Eighth Street, 375 feet east of East Avenue, Long Island City, for a two-story factory.

Brooklyn.

The three-story dwelling at 303 Sterling Place, on plot 19 by 131, between Vanderbilt and Underhill Avenues, has been sold by Charles E. Stickers-on for Mrs. Matilda H. Christensen to a client for occupancy.

M. McKinnen has sold the dwelling at 620 Seventy-sixth Street for the estate of C. Frank and the two-family house at 69 Dahlgren Place for Mary A. Roberts to a client for investment.

Yonkers Sale.

New Yorker Buys Ossining Farm.

The Robert H. Farley Organization, in conjunction with W. H. Oliver, has sold the Neis Farm at Ossining of 18 acres, on the Kitchawan State road, to a New York buyer.

Commercial Leases.

Frederick Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr., have leased, through Cross & Brown, the building at 152 and 154 East Thirty-fourth Street to Arthur J. Riese for a term of years, aggregating $12,000.

John Peters has leased for the Lockwood Construction Company to the Degnon Contracting Company the store and parlor floor at 41 East Fourteenth Street for offices in connection with the construction of the subway on East Fourteenth Street.

The Cross & Brown Co. has leased the store at 251 West Fifty-seventh Street to Eugene A. H. Watson & E. F. Stoeckle.

Realty Notes.

Leon S. Altmayer has placed a first mortgage of $11,000 on the four-story flat at 1,341 Third Avenue, 19 by 75, between Seventy-sixth and Seventy-seventh Streets.

Schwartz Brothers, dress manufacturers, have moved from their former quarters, 126 West Thirty-fourth Street. In accordance with their promise to the Save New York Committee they have gone outside of the retail zone to 39 West Twenty-ninth Street.

The owners of the property at 331 to 335 West Twenty-third Street stated yesterday that the announcement of the sale at auction of the property on Friday in the Vesey Street rooms was erroneous. The property had been listed in the auction offerings for the week.

Henry I. Cooper has moved his office from 200 Broadway to 17 West Forty-second Street and is associated with the Chelsea Leasing Co., Inc.

The Deadly Parallel of Cost
RENTING OR BUYING

Weigh the cost of buying or renting—Decide for yourself which is the cheapest and gives you the most for your money.

COST TO RENT
$1,500 YEARLY
Is the average cost to rent a 7-room and bath apartment in good neighborhood of New York City. You get small rooms, some on court or air-shaft, no grounds, no cool porches. Seldom an artistic outlook. At the end of the year—what have you? Nothing.

COST TO BUY

RICH JUNK DEALER SLAIN IN HIS SHOP

VALUABLES NOT DISTURBED

The police of Hoboken are investigating the murder of Leo Lewis, a wealthy junk dealer, who was found yesterday morning lying in the rear of his place of business at 2 Paterson Avenue. There were two bullet wounds in his chest and a third just below his heart. His skull was also fractured in two places.

Fifteen minutes before the body was discovered by Police Sergeant Donohue, Mrs. Kate Logan and Mrs. Minnie Hubert, who both live in 607 Ferry Street, almost opposite the junk shop, heard several shots fired, but did not see any one emerge from the building. One of them recalled that there was no rear exit from the place, and when a truck driver passed they asked him to summon a policeman. They kept watch on the door until Sergeant Donohue arrived five minutes later.

When Donohue entered the shop he saw a trail of blood leading from the centre of the shop toward the rear. He followed and about twenty feet away in a corner he found Lewis, who was dead. Near by Donohue discovered a blackjack, the leather casing of which had been broken and the small shot which had filled the end scattered about the floor. A thorough search of the shop was made, but this was the only clue which was discovered.

In a preliminary investigation the police learned from Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Hubert that Leo Lewis, Jr., the dead man's son, had left the premises at 10 o'clock, a half hour before the body was found. Lewis readily admitted the fact, and declared that his father was alone when he came out of the building. The police decided the motive of the crime was not robbery, since a gold watch, a diamond stud, and $168 in cash was not taken from Lewis's body. His wife and two daughters were brought to Police Headquarters last night and questioned. The police admitted that the family was unable to throw any light on the murder. So far as known, Lewis had no enemies. He was very popular among business men. Lewis lived in a handsome house at 290 Eighth Street, Jersey City.

SWANN SENDS QUERIES FOR SLAYER COCCHI

Prosecutor Gets Hint That Way May Be Found to Send the Murderer Here.

District Attorney Swann prepared yesterday a long series of questions which will be sent to Italy to be asked of Alfredo Cocchi, murderer of Ruth Cruger, regarding his relations with members of the police force and regarding the help he received from accomplices in making his escape.

A private cablegram was received yesterday from the Italian lawyer representing the District Attorney's office in Italy, holding out some hope that a way may be found of bringing Cocchi to this country for trial. It has been urged upon District Attorney Swann that great care must be taken not to offend Italian sensibilities by any direct request on the part of this Government that Italian law be disregarded in this case.

If extradition is refused, District Attorney Swann nevertheless will seek to have Cocchi brought to this country as a witness, even though it would be necessary to pledge his safe return for trial in Italy. It is believed that in order to clear up all questions regarding Cocchi's police connections and regarding those who helped him to divert suspicion from himself and to escape from this country, it is necessary to have Cocchi's presence in this country.

Assistant District Attorney William Harman Black, who has had much experience with the Italian authorities, said that the fact that Cocchi had confessed that he had committed the crime, might make it possible to extradite him, even under existing Italian laws. Other criminals, he said, whom this country has unsuccessfully sought to extradite from Italy, have all asserted their innocence.

One of the witnesses before the Grand Jury yesterday whose name was not given was said to have given direct proof that certain policemen have blackmailed automobile drivers into paying cash to avoid going to court to face charges of violating vehicle regulations.

Another witness was Herbert Roemmele, 14 years old, who was employed as an errand boy for Cocchi at the time when Ruth Cruger was murdered. Roemmele has said that he saw Cocchi digging in his cellar between 6 o'clock and 7 o'clock in the morning on the day after the murder. Detective Lagarenne, who made a search of the cellar, but failed to find the body two days after the murder, was a witness before the Grand Jury.

BACKS REQUEST FOR COCCHI

Italian Mission Urges Government to Grant Extradition.

ROME, July 16.—The Italian War Mission, headed by the Prince of Udine, which has just returned from its visit to the United States, called yesterday on Premier Boselli and other ministers, and gave a highly satisfactory report of its trip to America and the arrangements it made there. The Prince of Udine brought with him a message from President Wilson to King Emmanuel in reply to one sent by the King.

The members of the mission, who are in a position to appreciate the feeling in the United States concerning the case of Alfredo Cocchi, murderer of Ruth Cruger, are urging the Government to permit the extradition of Cocchi. The mission maintains such action would strengthen Italy's popularity in America and would be in accordance with the spirit, if not the letter, of the Italian penal code.

TOMPKINS ACCUSED OF TRIPLE MURDER

OWING TO MRS. HUMPHRIES

EBENSBURG, Penn., July 16.—Sheriff Mulhollen and County Detective Custer, investigating the murder of Edmund Humphries, his wife and son, near Carrolltown yesterday, gave out a statement tonight in which they said it had been learned that there was a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Humphries and George C. Tompkins over money matters. Mrs. Humphries had loaned Tompkins $1,000 to aid him in purchasing a one-fourth interest in the Newbern Coal Company. She demanded the return of this money and there were hot words. When the trip was started to Philadelphia yesterday it was for the purpose of having Tompkins place a mortgage on property he owns there in order that Mrs. Humphries might receive her money.

Sheriff Mulhollen further asserts that Mrs. Tompkins refused to come to Cambria County to live, and she objected to her husband remaining here. Tompkins is said to have brooded over the separation from his family.

For the first time since the murder county officials this evening asserted that the evidence against Tompkins was convincing and that they were confident they had the right man.

Joseph Westover of Barnesboro saw a man staggering along the road yesterday morning, blood dripping from his face and another man driving toward the fleeing one in an automobile. Westover believed the man in the road was drunk and paid no further attention to him, but when he heard of the murder he came to Ebensburg and told his story.

The warrant charging Tompkins with the crime was read to him in the Ebensburg jail this morning. He appeared to be as calm as any of those in his presence.

"Before God I am innocent," he exclaimed. "My hands are clean of this crime. There is some testimony I forgot to tell before the Coroner's jury yesterday, and I want to tell it now. I thought it all out last night in my cell and made notes of it on my collar."

Tompkins had on the same pointed shoes which yesterday were claimed by the State to correspond with tracks made in the cornfield toward the spot where the elder Humphries was finally shot to death at a fence.

SOLDIER SHOOTS MAN, DIES.

Ordered to Leave House, He Turns Revolver on Himself.

Dressed in khaki, but wearing no mark that indicated his regiment, Joseph Mazurkiewicz entered the home of William Jarmalinski at 232 Thirteenth Street, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon and asked for whisky. Mrs. Jarmalinski refused to give him any, but he went to a cupboard and helped himself, whereupon she ordered him to leave. Mazurkiewicz, who had been drinking, became abusive, and when Mrs. Jarmalinski's brother-in-law, John Domaszewski, interfered the soldier shot him in the leg, but not dangerously.

Mrs. Jarmalinski locked the door and called for the police, whereupon Mazurkiewicz put his revolver into his mouth and fired. He died in an ambulance on the way to St. Francis Hospital. Papers on him showed he had registered at Toledo, Ohio, on June 5 and had apparently enlisted at Columbus, Ohio. Since arriving in Jersey City he made friends with Polish residents, who all declared they knew nothing of his past. The revolver was not a Government service weapon.

ASK EQUAL FREIGHT RATES.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 16.—Special Examiner George S. Gibson of the Interstate Commerce Commission is sitting at the Marlborough-Blenheim, hearing the plea of New England for parity with New York and Philadelphia in Southeastern freight differentials. Lawyers for a number of New England chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and large shippers are united on one side, and attorneys for between fifty and sixty carriers, including big trunk lines and coast steamship companies, are opposing them.

W. H. Chandler, rate expert for the Boston Chamber of Commerce, testifying in rebuttal of railroad testimony presented at Boston whereby the carriers justified the new Atlanta-Boston rate of $1.19 as compared with the Atlanta-New York rate of $1.14, made the point that if the carriers were entitled to an additional rate as to Boston from Southern points, then shippers should be entitled to a reduction in the case of goods consigned from Southern points to Philadelphia.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "we are dealing with two highly competitive sections where the rates are governed by rail and water transportation and not by all rail lines. We do not object to the rate per se, but we are insisting that there is no justification in the 5 per cent. rate decision or elsewhere for disrupting the parity which has so long prevailed with relation to differentials from Southeastern points to Philadelphia, New York, and New England. We do not believe that New England would object to even a higher rate if that rate applied to the group referred to."

JUMPS OVERBOARD AT SEA.

When the United Fruit steamship Calamares arrived late yesterday at an American port the Captain reported that John A. Lyon, 54 years old, of Pittsburgh, Penn., has jumped overboard on the night of July 14 on the voyage from Havana. He went down to dinner on this day and was apparently all right, according to the passengers who sat near him at table.

After the meal was over Mr. Lyon went to his cabin for a few minutes and then came out on the deck and jumped overboard on the starboard side. The cry was raised "Man overboard!" and the ship was stopped almost immediately and the emergency boat lowered, but no trace of the passenger could be seen.

When the steward searched Mr. Lyon's cabin he found a note for the Captain of the ship asking him to notify his brother, George A. Lyon, Commonwealth Building, Pittsburgh, of his death.
